Food Prices Uncontrolled

B.C.'s food prices monitoring program has been totally ineffective in stopping price increases, Consumer Affairs Minister Rafe Mair said Thursday.

Mair said in an interview that the program, which until May was under his jurisidiction but now is in the hands of Agriculture Minister Jim Hewitt, is powerless to stop price increases.

He said provinces can do very little to control prices and that the federal government must take the necessary initiatives.

Finance Minister Evan Wolfe said in June, 1977, that B.C. would set up a prices review and monitoring board in an attempt to control inflation once the federal anti-inflation program was ended.

However, no such board has been set up, even though the federal plan was dismantled earlier this year.

"The fact of the matter, the cold hard fact, is that most of the products we use in B.C. come from outside the province and, indeed, many of the wage settlements that occur in B.C. either come from outside the province, or outside-the-province wages are the bench mark by which they are judged here in B.C.," Mair said.

"So, really, you're controlling a very, very small segment of wages and prices, and letting the rest of it run free."

Mair said prices inevitably will continue to increase, something which could lead to serious labor problems.

Building Peace But Salmon Strike Looms

Labor peace in B.C.'s hard-pressed construction industry seemed assured today but the vital salmon fishing industry appeared to be heading for a strike.

Jack Nichol, president of the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union, said Thursday three negotiating committees representing 4,300 shoreworkers and salmon fishermen will meet today to set a strike deadline.

Nichol announced the meeting in Prince Rupert after 3,000 shoreworkers voted 81.2 per cent in favor of striking.

Nichol said some areas have not reported vote results but he doubted a few straggling polls would change the over-all total.

He did not disclose the terms of the latest offer.

The president said that shoreworkers "certainly demonstrated in the most profound way that they're not prepared to accept what the (cannery) operators have on the table with the last offer."

Meanwhile, in Vancouver a tentative contract settlement for the construction industry was announced jointly by Chuck McVeigh, president of the Construction Labor Relations Association, and Jim Kinnaird, spokesman for a joint bargaining council representing 17 unions.

The settlement is the first in many years reached without third-party intervention.

About 40,000 construction workers and 850 contractors will now begin ratification votes, expected to take about a month, they said.

McVeigh said monetary terms of the contract are the same as those the council earlier refused to take to the workers. It centres on a basic increase of $1.62 an hour over two years, he said.

Previous industry contracts expired April 30.

PICKING BEFORE WELFARE

Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm said today that no new single and employable applicants will be allowed to receive welfare in the Fraser Valley or Okanagan areas until all the current fruit and berry crop is picked.

Some Fraser Valley fruit growers said earlier this week that their berries are rotting on the vine because they cannot find enough pickers.

However, Okanagan fruit growers said they have more pickers than they need. As well, Richard Bullock, president of the British Columbia Fruit Growers Association, said reports of worker shortages are isolated, and in those cases it is usually the farmer who is at fault for his treatment of workers.

Thursday, more than 200 placard-waving demonstrators demanding higher welfare payments greeted Vander Zalm as he opened a new welfare office in Vancouver.

Death Sentence For Soviet Spy

MOSCOW (AP) — A Soviet court today sentenced Anatoly Filatov, a Soviet administrative worker, to death by firing squad for spying, the news agency Tass said.

The death verdict against Filatov, whom Tass called "an agent of a foreign intelligence service," came at the end of a week of well-publicized trials during which dissidents Anatoly Shcharansky and Alexander Ginzburg received labor camp sentences of 13 and eight years respectively.

Filatov is unknown to dissidents here and Western diplomats also claim they do not know him.

Shcharansky's sentence was two years less than the 15 requested by the prosecutor, the longest prison sentence allowed by Soviet law. The charge of treasonable espionage could have meant the death penalty, but the prosecutor had cited the defendant's youth and clean record and recommended leniency.

U.S. President Carter reiterated the U.S. position today in Bonn, West Germany, telling a news conference: "Our voice will not be stilled as we consider these violations, and others around the world, of human rights."

Earlier today, outside the courtroom, Shcharansky's 70-year-old mother, Ida Milgrom, stood in a light drizzle and read to reporters a statement thanking Carter for his support of her son.

Mrs. Milgrom had been barred from the courtroom every day of the five-day trial, although another son, Leonid, was admitted for all but secret sessions.

Natalia Shtiglits, who claims to be Shcharansky's wife, said Thursday she has a promise of continued U.S. support for her husband.

Miss Shtiglits met in Geneva Thursday with U.S. State Secretary Cyrus Vance and said afterward he told her the United States will "continue to act" until Shcharansky is free.

Meanwhile, strong sentiment was reported forming in the U.S. Senate to curb economic and technological assistance to the Soviet Union in retaliation for the continued persecution of Soviet dissidents.

And in London, British Foreign Secretary David Owen — reacting to the Shcharanky sentence and Thursday's sentencing of Soviet dissident leader Alexander Ginzburg to eight years of hard labor — has blocked a planned visit to London by a Soviet government minister.

B.F. Bratchenko, Soviet coal minister, was to have begun a U.K. visit Sunday.

In the British House of Commons, 120 members of Parliament signed an all-party motion expressing revulsion at the dissident trials and calling on Labor Prime Minister James Callaghan's government to take "appropriate action."

INUIT SETTLE WITH OTTAWA

OTTAWA (CP) — Inuit of the Western Arctic will own 95,830 square kilometres of land and receive $45 million under a tentative land settlement agreement announced today.

In return they will give up all claim to the 436,800 square kilometres of the Western Arctic which includes the resource-rich Mackenzie River delta.

The announcement by Indian Affairs Minister Hugh Faulkner came in a joint position paper released by the government and the Committee for Original People's Entitlement (COPE), the organization representing 2,500 western Inuit — who refer to themselves as Inuvialuit.

Calling it a landmark in the government's program to reach settlement of northern claims, Faulkner said the proposal would allow Inuvialuit to participate in the economic development of the North while ensuring their cultural heritage would be protected.

Faulkner indicated the COPE agreement may serve as a model for future land claim settlements. He said no settlement in the Eastern Arctic, the Mackenzie delta or the Yukon will offer a better deal than COPE is getting.

Sam Raddi, COPE president, said the proposal reflects the interests of his people fairly, but said it is just a first step in reaching a final settlement.

The board said that the $80,578,400 in additional facilities are not needed this year and only a relatively small part of them might be required in the next two years.

Police Walk Out

CLEVELAND (AP) — Mayor Dennis Kucinich today asked the state of Ohio for National Guard troops and any other assistance it can provide, after a strike by 1,500 patrolmen left this city of 700,000 virtually without police protection. There were no reports of widespread crime.

Postal Row In Vancouver

VANCOUVER (CP) — A dispute over shift starting times has disrupted operations at the Vancouver post office.

Day shift workers joined a work stoppage that began Thursday night when workers remained in the cafeteria during their shift to protest changes in starting times.

Betty Amos, a post office spokesman, said some workers have refused to join the protest, but she could not say exactly how many employees were on the job or to what extent post office routine was being disrupted.

Amos said that as a result of the dispute mail deliveries in Vancouver would be minimal today. However, she said mail service for points outside Vancouver would be normal because mail for these centres was dispatched Thursday night.

Amos said employees were ordered back to work by union and management officials, but refused to comply.

Lloyd Ingram, local union president, said the dispute resembles a situation in London, Ont. in which one worker has had 16 different shift changes since mechanization began. Union officials say the post office's mechanization program is behind current moves to change shifts.

In Victoria, a post office spokesman said all operations are working normally.

Meanwhile, Bob Andstein, president of the postal union's Nova Scotia local, said Thursday that unless post office management improves its contract offer to the Canadian Union of Postal Workers by mid-August the postal workers will be on strike by the first of September.

Andstein said in Halifax 92 per cent of the union's members have voted to support the union's monetary demands in the new contract. The vote was conducted last weekend.

The postal workers contract, which expired 13 months ago, has been under renegotiation for the last 15 months.

The dispute was turned over to a conciliation board in March and a report from that body is expected by mid-August, Andstein said in an interview.

"If the employer's position is negative, as it has been in the past, then we'll be on strike by the beginning of September," he said, later adding that if the postal workers do strike it will signal a long shutdown of the post office because "the employer will try to smash the union."

The union's five-part wage demands were sent to the federal treasury board Thursday, Andstein said.

Among other things, the demand seeks reclassifications, improvements in the cost of living allowance formula, a catchup settlement to offset inflation plus a general wage increase.

FORESTS IN TROUBLE

B.C. could be on its way to one of its worst forest fire seasons in recent years, a government spokesman said Thursday.

Arnold Ginnever, program manager for the government's forest protection program, said that if current weather trends continue, "we would be in trouble, there's no doubt about it."

Cost of fighting the fires this year has risen to $3.2 million, more than three times the amount for the same period last year.

The government has spent $1.6 million fighting fires in the Prince Rupert district alone, he said.

Ginnever said that July and August are traditionally dry months in B.C.

Meanwhile, H. G. Doerkson, provincial forest fire suppression officer, said in a news release that if B.C.'s weather continues its abnormally dry, warm and sunny trend, the entire province could be facing high to extreme forest fire danger for the balance of the summer.

Ninety-four new fires were reported this week, he said, bringing the total for this year to 790, compared with 759 for the same period last year.

Seventy-nine fires were still burning Thursday, Doerkson said.

Indian Fishing Ban 'Powder-keg'

Times News Services

VANCOUVER — Fighting is feared this weekend between Indians and federal fisheries officers over cutbacks in native fishing days on the Fraser River.

A special detail of fisheries officers was sent Thursday to Lilloqet — the expected trouble spot — where seven Indian bands have said they will ignore new fishing bans introduced because of low salmon counts.

The Indians insist they should not suffer for poor management and over-fishing by the white man.

Chief Victor Adolf of the Foundation Band said the 500-plus Indian fishermen in the area will not resort to violence although "we are all prepared to go to jail."

But others worry that there will be a physical confrontation.

"We're sitting on a powder-keg," one fisheries officer said.

The Indian revolt was sparked by an International Pacific Salmon Fishing Commission (IPSFC) decision to scrap the first two days of the normal four straight days of fishing for natives north of Boston Bar.

That means no fishing Thursday or Friday this week from Boston Bar to Texas Creek and no fishing Monday or Tuesday from Texas Creek to Churn Creek.

IPSFC chairman Rod Hourston said the ban is necessary because of low counts of sockeye headed for Stuart Lake spawning grounds near Fort St. James — the first major salmon run of the year. He said the expected 250,000-fish count is down by 50,000 and the ban will hopefully rectify the situation.

New Westminster district fisheries supervisor Lyle Freeman said the situation is an emergency and if Indians ignore the ban his officers are ready to enforce the law "to protect spawning grounds and to provide food for the isolated bands in the north."

Fifteen extra officers were sent to Lillooet Thursday. There are normally one full-time and three part-time agents. And the RCMP has been advised of the situation.

Freeman said the officers will not wear guns even though some men have been shot at in the past years, apparently by poachers. His men have been ordered to use discretion.

OTTAWA AD BILL TOPS $27 MILLION

OTTAWA (CP)-By the time the federal government and its agencies finished promoting everything from Loto Canada tickets to flying Air Canada, the 1977 federal advertising bill came to slightly more than $27 million.

The information came as the result of request last October by Progressive Conservative MP James Balfour (Regina East) for a written record of all government advertising for the previous year.

It took nine months and cost at least $2,000 for the government to compile the information, officials said.

NEW DIFFICULTIES

BONN (AP) — President Carter received a sedate official welcome to West Germany today after a breakfast conference with U.S. State Secretary Cyrus Vance that touched on new difficulties in U.S.-Soviet relations.

During Carter's 7½-hour flight from Washington, a U.S. official travelling with the president said Carter's sharp criticism of the trial of Russian dissident Anatoly Shcharansky "certainly hasn't improved" relations between the United States and the Soviet Union. The official declined to be quoted by name.

Detention Sparks Clash

SIDON, Lebanon (Reuter) — Guerrillas of Yasser Arafat's Al Fatah commando group clashed with radical Palestinians in southern Lebanon today and first reports said at least 12 persons were killed or wounded.

Palestinian sources said the fighting began Thursday night because of disagreement over the temporary detention of 40 men of the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon (UNIFIL) by hard-line guerrillas last Wednesday.

As the Palestinians battled each other with automatic weapons and rocket-propelled grenades near the southern ports of Sidon and Tyre, panic-stricken civilians fled Tyre for safer areas, witnesses reported.

Al Fatah threw up 14 roadblocks on a 10-kilometres stretch of the main coastal road leading from Tyre to Beirut, the witnesses said, and encircled pockets of radicals entrenched in the refugee camps of Al Buss and Ain Heleh in Tyre and Sidon respectively.

On Wednesday, guerrillas of the hard-line Rejection Front seized 40 UNIFIL troops and held them captive for five hours.

Young Cools It On Prisoners

Young, wife Jean and son Andrew III

GENEVA (AP) — Andrew Young, controversial U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, said Thursday he did not mean people in the Soviet Union are freer than those in the United States when he spoke of "political prisoners" in the U.S.

Young made the latest clarification of his stormy diplomatic career after:

—The House of Representatives in Washington killed on a 293-to-82 vote a resolution from Representative Larry McDonald (Dem. Ga.) calling for Young's impeachment.

—State Secretary Cyrus Vance, here for arms limitation talks with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, summoned Young to a private lunch after chastising him for telling a French newspaper that the U.S. has "hundreds, perhaps thousands" of political prisoners.

— Former U.S. state secretary Henry Kissinger said in Chicago that Young should resign if he cannot keep his "outrageous" opinions to himself; —A black Rhodesian official challenged Young's assertion, also in the Paris newspaper Le Matin, that the "camp" of white Prime Minister Ian Smith was responsible for the recent massacre of 13 missionaries and children in the Vumba mountains of war-torn Rhodesian.

Several times since his appointment as ambassador in 1977, Young has been forced to retreat from or explain statements that appeared to disagree with Carter administration positions. There have been periodic calls for his ouster.

In the latest flap, Republicans including Senator Barry Goldwater of Arizona, National Republican Chairman Bill Brock and several members of the House called for Young's resignation, while House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, a Democrat like Young, told reporters: "I think Andy could have done well if he had curbed his tongue at this particular time . . . I don't believe there is such a thing as a political prisoner in America and I don't believe Andy believes there is such a thing either."

Jody Powell, President Carter's spokesman, said Young's statement does not reflect U.S. policy and the state department's press spokesman said the department does not agree with it.

But in an interview Thursday with the British Broadcasting Corp., Young, in Geneva for a meeting of the UN Economic and Social Council, said he does not feel at odds with Carter on foreign policy.

After Thursday's session with Vance, Young read a statement to reporters saying he is "in full accord" with the criticism by the state secretary and Carter of the current Soviet trials of dissidents.

Young asserted he has "never equated the status of political freedom in the U.S. with that in the Soviet Union," adding: "I know of no instance in the U.S. where persons have received penalties for monitoring our government's position on civil of human rights."

Young said the newspaper interview "has been excerpted to give an erroneous impression of my views on the trial of Anatoly Shcharansky," a Jewish activist being tried in Moscow on a charge of high treason by spying for the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency.

In the second part of Le Matin's interview, published Thursday, Young was asked who was responsible for the Rhodesian missionary massacres, which the Rhodesian government and most missionaries blame on black nationalist guerrillas.

"To my knowledge, no one really knows who was responsible," he replied. "The first attack (on a Salvation Army mission) might have been the work of an independent rebel band. But they would have been immediately put out of action by the nationalists.

"That is why I would say that, if it is a question of a planned operation to attack missions — which seems to have been verified in recent weeks — that can only come from the Smith camp."

In the Rhodesian capital of Salisbury, Elliott Gabellah, the black co-minister of foreign affairs, challenged Young to come see the "evidence" that guerrillas were responsible and said he hopes the American people and government "do not support a policy designed to whitewash ruthless butchers."

Young later told a French audience in a nationally televised interview from Paris that Cuban and Soviet influence in Africa is vastly overestimated.

"I don't believe this influence parallels that of France, Britain or even the United States," he said.

2,4-D Use Monday In Lake Near Vernon

KELOWNA (CP) — The provincial water investigations branch will begin using the herbicide 2,4-D against Eurasian milfoil weed in Kalamalka Lake near Vernon on Monday, branch spokesman Peter Scales said Thursday.

Scales said the herbicide will be used for spot treatment over about 10 acres at the north end of the lake, and other areas of the lake might be treated the following week. None of the sites are near recreational beaches, he said.

John Warnock, a spokesman for the South Okanagan Environmental Coalition which filed court actions leading to court orders curtailing the herbicide program, said the coalition has neither the time nor the money to oppose any application to begin next week.

He said it now is up to Okanagan residents to intensify their protest campaign so that the government will change its position.

Earlier, in Victoria, Environment Minister Jim Nielsen said his ministry has received full approval to apply the herbicide in six areas on Kalamalka and Okanagan and Skaha lakes.

Tire Caused Crash?

TORONTO (CP) — Air Canada and Transport Canada officials say shreds of rubber from a retreaded tire have been found in one of the engines of an Air Canada DC-9 jet that crashed on takeoff at Toronto International Airport June 26.

A Transport Canada official who asked to remain anonymous said Thursday that examination of the plane's engines at Dorval International Airport in Montreal has been completed and a report submitted to the ministry.

The official also said there were no bird remains in the engine. There had been speculation that the aircraft lost power in its right engine when it ingested a bird. The crash of the twin-engine jet killed two persons and injured the 105 others aboard.

Ralph Leak, Air Canada's supervisor of flight safety in Montreal, said investigation of the engines is complete. He would say only that rubber was found in the engine and that the tire involved was a retread.

ANTHRAX OUTBREAK CONFIRMED

FORT SMITH, N.W.T. (CP) — An anthrax outbreak in bison near the northern boundary of Wood Buffalo National Park was confirmed Thursday by a veterinarian.

Dr. Gordon Baux of Calgary, regional veterinarian for the federal health of animals branch, said tissue tests from one animal from the park have proved positive.

Tissue from seven other animals sent to the federal animal health laboratory in Lethbridge are not complete, Baux said.

Gas Tax Reduction Refused

DAWSON CREEK (CP) — The B.C. government has turned down a request by gasoline retailers in northeastern B.C. that a 17-cent road tax be lifted so they can compete with gas stations in Alberta.

Retailers in this community, about 10 kilometres from the Alberta border, told the government that their businesses have suffered because motorists cross the border to buy lower-priced gasoline. This could cause layoffs, they said.

However, Finance Minister Evan Wolfe says in a letter to the retailers that the government is opposed to tax zones because of the inequities and problems that would be faced by those just outside the zones. The government is studying the situation but has not yet found a solution, he says.

Wayne Ezeard, a spokesman for the gas retailers, said they now will ask the government to drop the 10-cent-a-gallon Insurance Corporation of B.C. subsidy tax.

HE'LL TRY VOTER HYPNOSIS

DECATUR, Ga. (UPI) — Nick Belluso's campaign for the Democratic nomination for governor isn't going all that well, so he's hired a hypnotist to mesmerize voters via television.

Belluso, 50, said he has hired a "renowned hypnotist who will use his hypnotic powers over a statewide television broadcast" before the Aug. 8 primary.

"I am arranging for the broadcast to take place several days before the primary election to hypnotize viewers into voting for me on election day," Belluso said.

The 60-second campaign announcement will be preceded by a warning statement informing viewers that "they'll be subjected to this hypnotic power and can either turn away or turn off their TV sets," he said.

Hints on Hospital Building

There are a number of reasons why the Helmcken hospital is already more than 10 per cent over budget on original firm projections — inflation seems to be a major factor — but if the department of health had loosened up a little, the public might not be faced with a bill for an extra $5 million.

Royal Columbian Hospital in New Westminster has demonstrated how work might go ahead on the Victoria hospital by building itself a new addition using somewhat unorthodox methods. Though health ministry officials were miffed at being kept at arm's length, the hospital acted as its own contractor, and hospital staff took an active part in planning.

But the important thing is they worked, and the new wing will open next month having cost only $27 million, instead of the $31 million originally forecast.

The Helmcken hospital is being held up by health ministry insistence on a standard guaranteed sum contract with the designers and builders. This requires completion of all architectural drawings before a contract is formally awarded, and understandably takes some time.

Victoria's hospital planning commission originally had hoped to proceed (next month) with a cost-plus contract, which meant the initial phases of excavation and construction could have begun before the last blueprints locating light switches and door knobs came off the drafting board.

That's how Royal Columbian went ahead on its construction project. The savings in time alone are significant — less than three years will have elapsed from beginning to completion, from digging the hole to accepting the first patients in the 130-bed acute care wing.

Dr. Bernard Martin-Smith, executive director of the hospital, says Royal Columbian employed the "fast track building" system, which is well-recognized in the construction industry but has not been used much in erecting hospitals.

"We concertina'd everything," he told the Vancouver Province. "Normally every detail has to be approved by the health department but we were moving so rapidly they didn't have time to give it all the attention they'd like to have done."

What did Royal Columbian "get away with?" he was asked.

"We didn't get away with it. We received good co-operation, but we made sure before going to any meeting, we knew more about the subject than the other side did." The quick pace left the civil servants with less control than they might have preferred, he says.

"From that point of view, I don't know if they want to go through with another project like this. But I promised the minister of health construction would come in under the estimate and on time."

Obviously, the provincial health ministry must retain responsibility for ensuring that basic hospital standards are met in any new health facilities, but results like these — nearly a 13 per cent saving in money and probably two years in time — call for widespread application elsewhere of the methods that achieved them.

The health ministry's insistence upon standard operating procedures may satisfy protocol requirements to the letter (as well as delaying a start on construction by nearly a whole year), but if other means can build a hospital faster, what are a few bruised egos to compare with such considerable savings?

Berry Picking

It's easy to anticipate the political statements that will be made about the difficulty B.C. berry farmers are having in finding people to work at picking the berry crop this year.

Those who want to believe that there really is a job available for everyone who wants badly to work will point to the farmers' complaints to show that hundreds of jobs are going begging because people would rather collect unemployment insurance than work in the fields.

It would be nice if it were that simple. But, unfortunately, it isn't.

To make their point, the farmers and the staff of a Canada Manpower Farm Labor Pool in Abbotsford state that the jobs are declined because someone can make almost as much on unemployment insurance as he can picking berries. Their figures prove, however, that in many cases a person can make two or three times more from unemployment than he can by working for eight or ten hours a day at hard manual labor under the hot sun.

The growers state that pickers, who are nearly always paid on a piece rate, can earn from $10 to $30 a day by picking. But, as anyone who has ever picked berries for more than a couple of hours knows, it's extremely difficult to make more than the minimum $10 figure until one has quite a lot of practice. That means that a novice berry picker is going to earn about $50 a week or a little more than $200 a month — a figure it's nearly impossible to live on in these inflationary times. It's also a figure that usually averages out at about half the minimum wage and would be quite illegal anywhere except on the berry fields.

At the same time unemployment insurance is paying between $48 and $160 a week, but it seems many people collecting are getting at least $500 a month, and often more — not a king's ransom but enough to live on.

One suggestion would, of course, be to cut unemployment insurance payments down to six or eight dollars a day to motivate people to go and work in the berry fields — never mind that many people who still couldn't find jobs, not even in the berry patches, might go hungry on that level of payments.

But perhaps it would be more reasonable for farmers to offer at least a basic living wage — the minimum wage, perhaps — to pickers. Yes, that would raise the price of B.C. berries, but perhaps it is time that consumers in this province realized that at the moment our fruit prices are low because workers are being underpaid and exploited.

" . . . there's the signal — they're sending another letter through . . . I wonder who this one will be for . . . "

RICHARD GWYN

Fat City? Go to University!

OTTAWA — Old soldiers (and sailors, and airmen) never die, they just retire, one by one by one.

A routine defence department press release last week reported the retirement of Admiral Robert Stephens, 54. In Stephens' biography, I noted that he had joined the navy as a cadet in mid-1941. Might he not be, I wondered, the last of the generation that had served in the Second World War? Mentally, I imagined interviewing Stephens, and tugging out from home the golden oldie anecdotes, ". . . and then jerry suddenly submerged . . ."

The Defence Department punched my question into its computerized personnel files, and chucked out an answer a remarkable half hour later. No, Stephens was not quite the last of a generation. Six other active senior naval officers, including Chief of Staff Admiral Robert Falls, has served during the war.

Among the close to 80,000 armed forces personnel, only 304 remain in all ranks in all services, whose careers stretch back to the Second World War, the defence department reports. Under normal circumstances, the last of these will retire in about three years' time. Then a chapter in Canada's military history will have faded away.

Now that bureaucrat-bashing has become Canada's second most popular indoor sport, it's worth taking time out to check whether the right bureaucrats are being bashed.

At the University of Toronto, the public has learned, thanks to a leaked internal memorandum, there are 120 administrators who earn $45,000 or more. How does this contrast with the comparable count of high-priced civil servants in Ottawa, I wondered.

Badly, for the University of Toronto, it turns out. In Fat City, only 288 civil servants earn $45,000 (this tally excludes public servants, like the heads of regulatory agencies).

To run its payroll of $9 milllion and its budget of $200 million, the University of Toronto needs 120 top-priced bureaucrats. To manage a payroll that's about 30 times as large ($300 million) and a budget that's more than 200 times as big ($46 billion), Fat City gets by with only 2½ times as many high-salaried civil servants.

This doesn't mean that Ottawa isn't still Fat City. It does mean that our educational system — university boards of governors are dominated by sound, sober businessmen — has built up across the country some far, far, fatter villages.

The latest federal-provincial battle over who gets what share of which lotteries is, in its way, already out of date. The intergovernmental battle will be over who gets to run gambling casinos.

The same week that Ottawa and the provinces were suabbling about Ottawa's new "numbers game" lottery, the recently opened gambling casinos in Atlantic City, N.J., turned in their first financial statement. In June, the casinos down there on boardwalk took in $16 million. The projected gross revenues for a full year are $200 million, with $50 million of that going to the federal and state governments.

On our side of the border, governments look down on casinos as unseemly. When Montreal Mayor Jean Drapeau proposed one, he was rudely refused. Instead, to help out Drapeau, Ottawa and Quebec started the Olympic Lottery. That was eight years ago. We now have eight Canadian lotteries, worth $2 billion a year. Ottawa's "numbers game" will be the ninth.

The attraction of lotteries to governments is that they amount to painless taxation. To justify them the proceeds are spent on worthy causes like medical research and amateur athletics.

In the case of gambling casinos, now that the worthy causes justification has been used up, the excuse, at a guess, will be "national necessity." Without casinos on our side of the border, governments will argue, Canadians will flock south and plunge our travel account even more deeply into the red.

How long would you guess before we get gambling casinos? My own guess, allowing for some hemming and hawing and some intergovernmental squabbling, would be about three years. Alberta, after all, already has them in a small way, and it doesn't even need the extra revenues.

At a briefing for the press in Ottawa given by Jake Warren, head of Canada's team at the international trade and tariff discussions in Geneva, last week, reporters learned that European countries show few signs of making us an offer on agricultural tariffs that we could accept.

Today's riddle is: How, and from whom, did reporters learn this?

The answer is: I'm not allowed to tell you.

The ground rules for the briefing were the most bizarre in anyone's memory. Reporters were told they could use anything that was said, and could report that Warren had held the briefing, but could not attribute anything said at the briefing to Warren or to anyone else.

Put a Bag on Him

When a television reporter was told he could film the briefing but could not record it on the sound track, a colleague advised him: "Stick a paper bag over his (Warren's) head." When a radio reporter protested he'd be doubly disadvantaged since his listeners, obviously, wouldn't be able to see anything, anotber college suggested that he, "run a blank audio tape in the newscast."

No matter. At the briefing the unnamed, non-person said nothing. The real news, predictably, came later from Washington. There Warren's opposite number, U.S. chief negotiator Robert Strauss, told reporters on the record that the European agricultural offer was entirely unsatisfactory, that the Europeans weren't bargaining seriously and that the talks at present are headed for failure.

MARJORIE NICHOLS

Five GOP Lesser Lights Eye 1980

WASHINGTON — Gerald Ford and Ronald Reagan, the acknowledged frontrunners in the Republican presidential stakes for 1980, share the same liability. Both are considered slightly long in the tooth to be contemplating entry into a gruelling campaign, followed by a possible eight-year residence in the White House.

Reagan, the former movie star and California governor, would be 77 years old at the end of two terms. Ford would be 75. The other potential pretenders are all younger, but they also share liabilities: a lack of recognition and organization.

It can be argued that it is decidedly premature, two years in advance of the GOP nominating convention, to be casting the list of candidates. Jimmy Carter proved that it is possible to rise from obscurity to the presidency within such a brief period. But, as one strategist at the Republican national committee notes, there is "a serious flaw in that scenario."

The argument goes like this:

The reason the Republicans are so confident of their chances to regain the presidency in 1980 is that Jimmy Carter is faring so poorly.

Jimmy Carter ran and was elected as an "outsider." It would therefore be foolhardy for the Republicans to emulate the Democrats and select another outsider candidate. This theorem does not, of course, preclude the possibility that there is an obscure Republican legislator whose profile could be raised by some tramatic event. Something, say, like another nationally-televised Watergate hearing. But, for the present, there are only five names, other than Ford and Reagan, that consistently appear on the oddsmaker's list of possible Republican presidential candidates.

They are, in random order: Senator Howard Baker, 52-year-old minority leader of the Senate from Tennessee. It was the Watergate hearing, in fact, that catapulted Baker into the national spotlight four years ago. The Tennessean has served 12 years in the Senate and is regarded as able, if cautious, with good legislative credentials.

Baker occupies the ideological middle of the road. He is an attractive, charismatic man with an intriguing southern drawl. The senator does, however, have some serious defects as a likely candidate.

For one, he is a southerner and, secondly, he is being opposed in his bid for election to a third term this fall by the right wing of his own party. The party's right wing dislikes Baker because of the critical role he played in lobbying for the Carter administration's Panama canal treaties. The little senator (he stands only about five feet six inches) has developed a national base of support, but the fact that he is from Tennessee could prove his largest liability. His background is, in fact, not that different from Jimmy Carter's. A country lawyer from a town with a population of only a few hundred.

If Carter is the Democratic nominee in 1980, the argument goes, the Republicans would not want to choose a candidate who looks and sounds so similar. Baker, the son-in-law of the late, revered Illinois senator, Everett Dirksen, was considered by Gerald Ford as a running mate in 1976.

Insiders say one of the reasons Ford eventually rejected Baker was because of Mrs. Baker's well-known drinking problem. The senator's wife has since publicly declared her alcohol problem, but some of his supporters remain bitter.

To date, Baker has refused to make any statements, other than that he "may" become a candidate.

U.S. political history is littered with successful political turncoats such as John Connally, 61, former Democratic governor of Texas and protege of Lyndon Johnson who became treasury secretary under Richard Nixon.

However, only one man who switched parties has ever been elected president. That was Herbert Hoover. In totting up liabilities, it is doubtful that Connally's conversion to Republicanism would top the list.

He has a reputation as a wheeler-dealer and holds directorships in some of the country's largest corporations. Although never convicted, he was implicated heavily in the Watergate scandal and was one of Richard Nixon's most faithful defenders. Connally, a teetotaller, lives in opulent style and is regarded as right of centre. During his tenure as Nixon's treasury secretary, Connally brought relations between the U.S. and its trading partners, including Canada, to a new low by slapping on onerous import taxes and sponsoring other protectionist trade measures. Connally has been in and out of Washington since the early 1950s, serving first as Lyndon Johnson's legislative assistant.

He now says that it was Johnson's "great society" programs that sealed his decision to abandon the Democratic party. The former Texas governor, who was wounded the day John Kennedy was shot, believes that new constitutional limitations should be placed on all political offices. He believes, for example, that the presidency should be limited to one five-year term and senators to one eight-year term. Now a partner in a Houston law firm, he says he has not yet made up his mind about whether to run.

Senator Robert Dole, 55, the Kansan who was Gerald Ford's running mate in 1976, could be expected to inherit considerable support should Ronald Reagan not run. Though not as far to the right as Reagan on most issues, Dole is nonetheless regarded a foreign policy hardliner. He voted against the Panama canal treaties.

Dole, a war hero and former chairman of the Republican party, is one of the party's best stump speakers. It is said that Ford chose the Kansas senator as his running mate because of Dole's verbal agility and reputation as an able hatchet man. Dole has widespread support in the agricultural community.

Dole's only significant liabilities may be the fact that he is a one-time loser and that, coming from a small state like Kansas, he does not have a strong personal base.

George Bush, 53, former director of the Central Intelligence Agency, former ambassador to the United Nations and former member of the house of representatives from Texas. Bush, who is the definite dark horse in the race to date, has publicly declared his interest in running, though he has not yet formally declared.

The Texas middle-of-the-roader is seeking to capitalize on his experience in international affairs, hoping to contrast himself with Carter. In addition to his stint at the UN, Bush served from 1974-75 as the chief of the U.S. liaison office in Peking. The first Republican elected to the House from Houston, he is handsome, urbane and well-heeled. His problem will be establishing a national profile from a base outside government.

Bush resigned as director of the CIA the day Carter was inaugurated and now is director of a number of corporations, including a large bank holding company.

Another name frequently mentioned as a potential nominee is that of Illinois governor Jim Thompson, a 44-year-old liberal who drew national notice with his upset victory over the fabled Democratic machine in Illinois. Thompson has been making frequent trips outside his home state in an apparent testing of the waters, but most party insiders don't believe he will be a serious contender. The biggest strike against Thompson would appear to be the fact that he has little background in national or international affairs and is too far to the left of the mainstream of the Republican party.

Happy Writing

I would like to suggest to all business personnel who use the telephone to solicit business, to use the postal service.

A letter has never disturbed me changing a diaper. A letter has never woken me up. My dinner has never burned while I was reading a letter. I have never run in from the garden to read a letter. I have never gotten out of the bath to read a letter.

But when I do read a letter it is at my convenience, chances are I'm in a relaxed mood and so am more susceptible to a sales pitch. Happy writing! — N. Teague, 1165 Cloake Hill Road, Sidney.

Mechanic Licensing

On June 23 Labor Minister Allan Williams said that the provincial government had no intention of certifying all auto mechanics, claiming it "would not be feasible," and would "not be in the best interest of everyone because such a procedure could never be administered properly" etc.

Mr. Williams disregards the facts. Licensing has existed in Ontario since about 1968, followed by another law there regulating used car dealers to issue certificates to guarantee the roadworthiness of cars sold. This is superior to the B.C. inspection test and eliminates law suits in cases where a dealer sells a "clunker" to a customer.

Other provinces have similar laws to Ontario but Mr. Williams has let B.C. fall behind, disregarding public interests. — F. J. Morris, P.O. Box 24841, Vancouver.

All the Way With Nazis

By CLAUDE ADAMS

U.S. Nazi leader Frank Collin, flanked by cohorts, holds press conference in Chicago

WASHINGTON — Michael Breda would stand out in any crowd. It's the eyes, hard diamond bits that make you want to turn away. He has that classic fanatic's look, all coiled springs and brimming energy.

Breda, 36, is a Texan. He calls himself a minister of the Church of the Creator. He says he prays a lot for the white race.

Last Sunday, Michael Breda drove his white Chevy van into Marquette Park, a section of Chicago's largely ethnic southwest side. He parked around the corner from Rockwell Hall, headquarters of the local American Nazi party. He got out carrying a brown paper bag and a pair of high black leather boots.

He took a quick glance at the crowd, banged at the door of the building, and was admitted inside. A few minutes later, he emerged from the back. He was wearing a brown shirt, brown tie, brown pants, those menacing-looking boots and a swastika armband.

On this hot Sunday afternoon in Chicago, Michael Breda would say very little. He would stand with his hands behind his back in the middle of a public park while a little man with a bad facial rash called Frank Collin shouted into a microphone about Jews and Blacks and racial purity.

He would watch stonily while 2,000 Chicagoans yelled and cursed at one another. Even though most couldn't hear what Collin was saying, the people in the park were in a near-frenzy of excitement.

Michael Breda was not at all shocked by what the people were saying to one another. The word "death" was the post popular one — death to the Jews, death to the Blacks, death to the Nazis.

He was, of course, out of any physical danger. Four ranks of armed policemen, and a row of mounted cops separated him from the crowd. But he sensed that even without police around him, Michael Breda could have taken care of himself adequately.

After 90 minutes in the sweltering heat, he climbed into the van with a handful of other brown-shirts and drove back to Rockwell Hall under police escort. As he was driving away, the crowd heard that a Black man was in the park. Hundreds of people started running in one direction. Sure enough, someone had caught a young Black man. They were tearing at his clothes and beating him. Police intervened and began swinging clubs, and took the man away.

In the dim main room of the Nazi headquarters, under a grainy portrait of Adolf Hitler, Michael Breda agreed to an interview. He was standing apart from his colleagues. Frank Collin, the nominal leader of the group, was talking in rapid-fire sentences to the press. Teenaged boys were shaking his hand, and Collin was telling them to pick up their free swastika T-shirts before they ran out.

"Hey, are we all out of NIGAR BEWARE posters?" Collin yelled at one of his staffers. He was grinning widely, flushed with the attention, happy with the results of the afternoon. It was a beginning, he was telling the press boys, no beer-hall putsch or Nuremberg or anything like that, but a beginning.

"Beautiful, it was beautiful," his associates were saying to one another. "You shoulda seen the way the crowd tore down the Jew banner. Beautiful." They were clapping one another on the back.

But Michael Breda stood apart. He started talking slowly, hesitantly, about how he'd been an active white supremacist since the age of 17. But white supremacists, especially in Texas, are as coomon as road signs. So he made the final commitment — the Nazi uniform.

"This attracts the guy who doesn't give a damn anymore, the most courageous of our race right now. It's like I'm saying, I'm going to go all the way, and not play games anymore."

He moves into the specifics: the dangers of letting good white stock mix with "all kinds of lower intelligence levels." In public schools, how the nation's stock was turning into "garbage" because of social intermingling, how neighborhoods were deteriorating because of Blacks.

He talks about how the American Nazi party, fragmented after the assassination of national leader Lincoln Rockwell in the late 1960s, is rebuilding from within.

Sure, the party is preaching hatred, he says. But it's hatred of "what is destroying us, hatred of a disease."

And how, asks the reporter, eager to end the interview, do you get the uniform?

"Sears and Roebuck," Breda answers. "And the boots are old American Army issue." The reporter looks for a hint of a smile, a wry wink maybe, but the Texan behind the well-trimmed beard is not into comic relief.

Breda's presence in Marquette park on that particular Sunday, along with Frank Collin and the rest of the ragtag Nazi band, was testament to the perplexing nature of that thing called American Democracy. After months of national debate and legal wrangling, and the pleas of Chicago officials who wanted to muzzle the group, the U.S. Supreme Court — the same group that recently banned the use of comedian George Carlin's seven dirty words on commercial radio — cleared the way for the hate rally.

Fourteen hundred policemen, most of them on overtime duty, were called in to insulate the Nazis from the crowd and make sure a counter-demonstration by Blacks, Jews and Socialist students did not get underway.

The American Civil Liberties Union argued for their right to march and their freedom to say what they wished, even to the point of calling for another Jewish holocaust. That stand cost the ACLU hundreds of members and hundreds of thousands of dollars in contributions.

Whether the Nazis should have been allowed to stage a rally or not is, in the end, a moot point. They have little future as a political or social force. Their symbols are too stark, their jargon too apocalyptic to win them any widespread public acceptance.

What staggers the imagination, however, is how demagogues like Frank Collin and misfits like Michael Breda can draw a group of 2,000 middle-class Americans and split them into hostile groups.

"People are going to get blowed away," a young Chicago Black predicted to me on the eve of the rally. Nobody was killed in Marquette Park last Sunday. But that was the only happy news.

Ku Klux Klan Back at Work

By JONATHAN STEELE

JACKSON, Miss.—The Ku Klux Klan is burning crosses in Mississippi once again. After a lull of almost a decade, the petrol-soaked wood, the woosh of flame, and the sound of feet running off into the night have returned. The latest target is an unlikely one on the face of it — a white-owned newspaper in Jackson, the state capital.

Bill Minor, who runs the paper, is locally known as the dean of Mississippi journalists. For almost 30 years he was the Jackson correspondent of New Orleans' most famous paper, the Times Picayune. When his employers decided to close the office — in itself perhaps a sign that after 20 years of racial turmoil Mississippi had become good enough to have no news — he chose to stay on and start his own paper.

He calls it the Capital Reporter and it is a modest production with 12 pages a week. Like many other cities in the United States, Jackson suffers from a monopoly in which one group owns the only morning and evening daily papers. In Jackson's case the monopoly owner is the Hederman family, which took chauvinistic provincialism to excess in the days of segregation, claiming that everything was fine in the Magnolia State if only outsiders would leave it alone.

The day a suspect was arrested in connection with the killing of a prominent black civil rights leader, Medgar Evers, their headline was "Californian arrested in Evers' slaying." The suspect had been an infant when his parents came to the state.

Minor's father was a linotype operator, and Bill has been around newspapers all his life. Jackson needed a muck-raking paper which would investigate scandal in the state, he says. Helped by a lifetime of contacts, and by the paper's growing reputation, he has blasted away at corruption in government, in banking, in the public utilities and in campaign financing.

Besides the burning cross, he had bricks thrown through the windows of the office where he and his two reporters work. It has happened so often that he just keeps them boarded up. Their pavement newspaper racks have been stolen and smashed, and the city of Jackson has stopped placing its legal notices and other advertisements in the Capital Reporter.

The Klan's new activity worries him. One night last October 12 crosses were lit in different parts of the state. Three weeks ago the Klan marched openly in daylight in Tupelo, a town in the north-eastern part of Mississippi where blacks had protested at the behavior of the local police.

What worries Bill Minor even more is that the Klan is becoming more respectable, more "up-town" as he puts it. "These are not the redneck crowd, the violent White Knights of the early 1960s who were involved in the murder of civil rights workers. You have to give the FBI credit for breaking them," he says.

The new ones are in their late 20s, and have perhaps as many as 20,000 sympathizers.

Borg Brings Hope for Court Manners

By WILL GRIMSLEY

WIMBLEDON — Now that Bjorn Borg has established himself as No. 1 in the world of men's tennis, apt to reign for years, there is hope for a widespread change in court manners.

"The kids quickly adopt a hero, they always copy the champion," one highly placed U.S. official was heard to remark after watching the icy Swede systematically dissect Jimmy Connors 6-2, 6-2, 6-3, in last Saturday's Wimbledon final. "They could have no better example than Borg."

In recent years, spurred by the open boom and absence of authority, the game has been trending toward a state of anarchy.

Umpires and linesmen have become open targets for abuse, the fans for insults and profanity. Kids have been learning to throw racquets before mastering the proper toss on a serve. Their vocabulary would make a showgirl blush.

Brian Jones, writing in the London Daily Mail, took note of it during Wimbledon's latter stages when the teenagers and first-round losers took over the outer courts for the Consolation Plate and the Juniors tournament.

"The game is being gouged by shrapnel from the great American tennis explosion of the last 10 years," James wrote.

Pointing out that of the 256 singles entrants at Wimbledon 106 came from America, he added:

"This sort of massive numerical dominance has always given America more than her fair share of superb players. Inevitably it must also burden her with more than a fair share of brats."

He cited 19-year-old John McEnroe, a semi-finalist a year ago, as one of the chief offenders, recalling this incident after the Douglaston, N.Y., player had been eliminated — gesturing and growling — on an outside court:

"Isn't that the boy they said was going to be the next Jimmy Connors?" someone asked.

"Yes," replied another, "but not if he plays like that. Let's hope he grows up as Jimmy has."

Connors, who openly acknowledged that he was once "a punk," has matured in the last couple of years. He was the epitome of grace and good conduct in his losing bout with Borg.

But there are still youngsters who have adopted his early court histrionics and picked up similar umpire-baiting, gesturing, cursing habits from the mad Romanian, Ilie Nastase, now under three-month suspension.

Borg, 22, has been a model of court behavior since he came out of Sweden at age 16 to make a place for himself in the adult tennis world.

He has never been seen to chew out a linesman or umpire, to try to rattle an opponent or to insult a crowd.

Cool, poised, almost inhuman in his lack of emotion on the court, he plays the game with a businesslike dispatch, impervious to bad calls and outside distractions. When his work is done, he blends into the outside world, fulfilling his olbligations to his legion of autograph-seeking admirers, the public and the press.

Let's hope the kids are watching.

The Rules of the Game

Principles for the guidance of life.

1. Conduct toward animals.

a. When a bee gets into the parlor, go someplace else and stay there until the bee goes next door.

b. Steer clear of dogs.

c. Stay off horses, camels and elephants, and they will stay off you.

d. Don't annoy sharks by going into salt water. After all, sharks don't annoy you by going into the supermarket.

e. Don't expect love from a cat.

2. Self preservation.

a. Never argue with a policeman. Avoid lawyers. Remember Nelson Algren's rules: Never play poker with a man named "Doc" and never eat at a place called "Mom's".

b. Never drink martinis when you are farther than walking distance from your bed.

c. Always know who's behind you, and why, but never be the first to pull a knife. He may only be stalking the person in front of you.

d. Stay out of bus depots. Don't get mixed up with the government. Always let taxi drivers have the last word.

3. Conduct toward women.

a. Avoid lawyers.

b. Don't start anything unless you're looking for trouble.

c. Don't leave a ring around the bathtub.

d. Shave.

e. If you get mixed up with a strange woman, don't give your right name.

4. Conduct toward children.

a. Avoid adolescence.

b. Never strike a child who is stronger than you.

c. Train children to expect to grow up and send you to a good college so you can have the opportunity to make something of yourself.

d. Don't try to make children grow up to be like you, or they may do it.

5. Social behavior.

a. Always be serious, especially if you're a fool.

b. Don't argue with drivers who are outraged because they have just hit your automobile, since they may be carrying loaded pistols.

c. Never sit down at cocktail parties unless you want to have a cigarette butt ground out on you.

d. Don't get thick with your neighbor, since he may be carrying a loaded pistol.

e. Don't look bored with strangers you meet at other people's houses when they talk about tennis, jogging, diets, Freud, meditation, yoga, encounter groups, existentialism or demonic exorcism, since they may be carrying loaded pistols.

f. Never keep a loaded pistol in the house, since you may have to break a window to get in late some night after your wife has gone to bed.

6. Preserving esteem for humanity.

a, Avoid lawyers.

b. Don't get your hopes up about politicians.

c. Never look at TV game shows.

d. Take newspapers sparingly.

e. Never read bumper stickers.

f. Stay away from Moscow, fast-food drive-ins, exorcism movies and auto body repair shops.

a, Waste plenty of time. If you save it, you'll wind up having to use it for things you don't want to do.

b. Spend your money now. If you put it away for a rainy day and it doesn't rain until next week, it won't be worth enough to buy an umbrella at the present rate of inflation.

c. Avoid honesty unless absolutely necessary. Nine times out of 10, honesty either hurts people's feelings or makes them angry at you. In either case, they will almost certainly assume you are lying or think you are the kind of half-wit who can't resist telling the truth on every occasion.

d. Stay away from all movements, faiths, philosophies and people who threaten to help you find happiness. Happiness is a small and unworthy goal for something as big and fancy as a whole lifetime and should be taken in small doses. A half-bottle of wine once or twice a week can supply all the happiness the average person requires without leaving him in such bliss that he can't do anything worthwhile for the rest of his life.

Shipyard Gloom Growing

LAUZON, Que. (CP) — The Davie Shipbuilding Ltd. yards here are continuing to lay off workers every day in what some observers are calling the gloomiest situation since the Depression of the 1930s.

More than half the company's normal work force of 2,500 employees have been laid off, with the prospect that the number could drop to 500 by the end of this week.

Paul-Emile Vachon, vice-president of the workers' union affiliated with the Confederation of National Trade Unions, says the federal government is largely to blame because of delays in awarding repair contracts and pointed to a contract for renovation of the naval vessel Protector.

Davie, the main employer in this town across the St. Lawrence River from Quebec City, submitted a bid of $9 million, the lowest received. But government sources said this was more than they forecast and are continuing to review submissions.

Davie representatives also are concerned with a delay by Dome Petroleum Ltd. of Calgary in announcing a contract for construction of a huge $100-million ice-breaker for Arctic petroleum exploration.

To help the company compete for the contract, the union agreed to a quick renegotiation of its collective agreement last March so a firm price could be submitted.

Work on several important contracts is nearing completion with little new work in sight.

Controversial Unit Gets New Chief

OTTAWA (CP) — Col. Kent R. Foster of Calgary has been appointed commander of the Canadian Airborne Regiment in Petawawa, Ont., the elite unit which lost its previous commander after more than a week of controversy.

The 40-year-old Foster replaces Col. Jacques Painchaud of Quebec who was removed from command Wednesday by Admiral Robert Falls because of public criticism by the outspoken commander of Defence Minister Barney Danson.

Admiral Falls announced the appointment Thursday, along with a statement that Col. Painchaud, 43, has been assigned to national defence headquarters here.

Col. Foster, a former commander of the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry in Calgary, has been at defence headquarters since 1975, specializing in infantry, airborne and combat support requirements.

The replacement follows a series of published reports during the last several days concerning possible disbandment of the crack paratroop regiment which drew comments of "stupid" from Painchaud who also suggested Danson should resign if the reports were true.

Painchaud was called on the carpet Wednesday to explain his remarks and was subsequently removed from his post by Falls.

Danson has denied there are any plans to disband or to relocate the regiment. However, he has said the role of the unit is being reassessed to determine the maximum use of the paratroopers.

Falls said in his statement removing Painchaud from command that some of the statements attributed to the commander have been less-than-accurate reconstructions of his remarks.

"Nevertheless, no officer in the armed forces, reguardless of circumstances, can place himself in a position where his public statement could be interpreted as criticism of civilian authories," he added.

Foster, like Painchaud, is a career soldier who has risen rapidly through the ranks since enrolling at 18 in the Royal Canadian Infantry Corps.

METRIC TEXTBOOKS: WHO KNOWS COST?

TORONTO (CP) — If all school textbooks are going metric by 1980 and each must be reviewed by the Canadian government specifications board at a cost of between $50 and $500 apiece, how much will the abandonment of the Imperial System cost?

To the publishers who must pay the fee, the answer is a lot of money.

Exclusive use of metric will not begin until 1980 or later but conversion of textbooks is under way. This September, students will be tackling metric math problems when they return to the classroom.

"Many publishers are working as hard as they can to convert to metric but if we get a book that isn't perfectly metric, we can't reject it," said James Fraser, an education officer in the Ontario education ministry's curriculum branch.

The ministry has provided grants of 75 cents a child to school boards to buy equipment or books for use in teaching the metric system.

Oppose New House: NDP

OTTAWA (CP) — Ed Broadbent, New Democratic Party leader, has urged the 10 provincial premiers to oppose the federal government's proposed replacement of the Senate with a House of Federation.

In a letter released today Broadbent says the Liberal government's proposal is seriously misguided. The proposal to replace the 104-member government-appointed Senate with a 118-member body appointed by the Commons and the legislatures is part of a wide-ranging constitutional package.

"If this proposal should ever gain acceptance and become embedded as part of our Constitution, I think it is inescapable that future Canadians would experience as a result more regional tensions and a sense of national discontent with Ottawa which would flow from the Parliamentary delays and deadlocks which would inevitably occur," Broadbent said.

The NDP leader says he feels strongly enough about the matter to take the unusual step of writing each premier, urging them to consider arguments against it and alternatives to it.

Broadbent advocated abolishing the Senate and instead adding about 100 new seats to the Commons. The new members would be elected on a regional basis with about 20 from five economic regions of the country.

The 20 would be distributed among the political parties in proportion to each party's share of the regional vote in the federal election.

GOOD CROPS INDICATED

OTTAWA (CP) — Crop development in the Prairie provinces is generally ahead of normal for this time of year despite scattered rain and hail damage, Statistics Canada said Thursday.

The government agency said in a regular report that the majority of cereal crops have headed, oilseeds are in bloom.

Dredging Deal Puzzle

TORONTO (CP) — The head of a United States construction and dredging business told a fraud-conspiracy trial Thursday that he did not know how a deal to divide Quebec dredging work between two supposedly competing companies was meant to be implemented.

Ezra Sensibar, chairman of the board of Construction Aggregates Corp. of Chicago, had testified earlier that he was instrumental in an agreement under which 70 per cent of the work in Quebec would go to Marine Industries Ltd. and the remainder to a joint venture of McNamara Corp. and the Chicago corporation.

Sensibar was testifying at the trial of 11 businessmen and nine companies who are accused of defrauding public agencies of almost $4.3 million between 1969 and 1975 by rigging bids on dredging contracts.

The trial continues.

LOCKED OUT WORKERS CAN'T GET UIC BENEFITS

OTTAWA (CP) — Locked-out employees of Canada Packers Ltd. cannot receive unemployment insurance benefits, the Canada Employment and Immigration Commission ruled Thursday.

A spokesman for the commission said the act governing unemployment insurance prohibits the payment of benefits to employees without jobs because of a work stoppage due to a labor dispute.

The act is applied the same way, whether the stoppage is due to a strike or a lockout.

Canada Packers Ltd. locked out 4,000 employees in Toronto, Vancouver, Edmonton, Winnipeg and Lethbridge June 22 after employees of Swift Canadian Co. Ltd., which has plants in the same cities, went on strike.

All employees are members of the Canadian Food and Allied Workers Union.

Norm Alexander, president of union local 114 in Toronto, said locked-out employees should not be treated in the same manner as striking employees.

"Our people didn't take a strike vote or vote on a contract proposal," Alexander said. "We have been locked out of our jobs."

The spokesman for the employment and immigration commission said similar rulings have been made about employees involved in other labor disputes in recent years.

In Toronto, more than 1,000 Canada Packers employees attended a rally Wednesday outside federal unemployment insurance offices.

Open Mortgage Offered

TORONTO (CP) — Kinross Mortgage Corp., an affiliate of Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, introduced open residential mortgages Thursday which can be paid off in whole or in part at any time without penalty.

The five-year term mortgages, both conventional and National Housing Act, are available on owner-occupied residential property and are being offered at one-quarter per cent above the going mortgage rate, the company said.

The mortgages are available for both new and resale residential property, it said.

Kinross also introduced a three-year term mortgage open for full or partial pre-payment at any time, with three-month interest penalty for earlier termination.

This mortgage, available at one-quarter below conventional mortgage rates, is available on residential property but does not apply to NHA mortgages.

RCMP Crime Squad Chiefs Make Pitch for Tax Files

OTTAWA (CP) — Officers in charge of the RCMP commercial crime squads in Montreal and Toronto argued Thursday for access to income tax files in investigation of criminal offences.

Supt. F. A. Howe of Toronto told a royal commission into RCMP wrongdoing he didn't think such access would deter Canadians from voluntary compliance with the Income Tax Act.

Under a 1972 agreement with the revenue department, the RCMP has access to such information to fight organized crime by prosecution under the Income Tax Act.

However, Howe said, when such data produces evidence of a Criminal Code offence, the Mounties are prevented by the Income Tax Act's confidentiality provisions from passing the data to police who could investigate.

"It may well be that an amendment to the Income Tax Act or the (1972) agreement, or both, may be necessary," Howe said in a 1977 memo to a superior officer that was presented to the royal commission.

"Moreover, traditionally DNR (Tax) have been reluctant to report, in some cases, the existence of criminal offences to the appropriate police authority. This matter should be discussed with DNR (Tax) and, notwithstanding the voluntary compliance philosophy of the Income Tax Act, an attempt should be made to resolve this problem preferably by making it mandatory for DNR (tax) to report the existence of such offences."

Supt. Marcellin Coutu of Montreal said revenue officers there were so careful about the data they allowed Mounties under the 1972 agreement that a special projects unit declined to seven members from 20. Coutu said there was plenty of organized crime in Montreal but the RCMP couldn't get at it without help from the revenue department.

A policy directive issued after the 1972 agreement told Mounties they were to abide by its spirit and not pass tax data to investigators who weren't classed as "authorized persons" under the Income Tax Act.

Howe testified he didn't think this covered what he called "biographical" information on income tax returns. Mounties often passed along such data to other police forces.

One example involved what Howe called "a professional arsonist" sought by the Ontario Provincial Police. Howe defended giving the provincial force data about the man because he said there might be a tax interest. But he said the RCMP never followed this up.

Asked about the policy directive, Howe said such directives weren't to be interpreted "rigidly." Commissioner Donald Rickerd of Toronto asked whether there was any RCMP policy on interpretation of policy directives. Howe couldn't think of any.

Tory Fundraisers Trying The Mailing List Approach

By PAUL WHITELAW
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The "bagman" who arrived at Bill Mingo's law office recently with a request to contribute to the Conservative party wasn't wearing a pinstripe suit, traditional uniform of Canada's political fundraisers.

He was wearing a postman's uniform.

Mingo was amused but not surprised to open a letter, addressed by computer, that urged him to help fill the federal Tory coffers.

The Halifax lawyer says he had already received four similar appeals. And he ignored them all — because he is national chairman of the federal Liberal party's finance committee.

Mingo is one of more than 500,000 Canadians whose names have been culled by the Tory party from the mailing lists of magazines and catalogue sales operations.

The Conservatives are turning to so-called "direct mail" solicitation of people with no previously-known affiliation to their cause in a tradition-breaking effort to raise funds.

Tory strategists hope that traditional reliance on the "bagman" — typically, a business executive or corporation lawyer who stalks the country's boardrooms and exclusive clubs in the hunt for financial support — can be offset by the computer, the postie and his mailbag.

"The average return is about $3 for every $1 invested in direct mail," says David MacMillan, who co-ordinates the fundraising effort.

MacMillan is enthusiastic about the results so far — and he wonders why other federal parties haven't followed the Tories' lead in tapping the still unknown potential of direct mail in Canadian politics.

Using computerized mailing lists that can be rented from magazines, credit card companies and other commercial and professional organizations has become a mainstay of many U.S. political campaigns during the past 15 years.

The Conservatives, says MacMillan, turned to direct mail as a fundraising tool in 1975, shortly after the new Election Expenses Act came into effect.

"The law encourages small donations," he notes, admitting Canadians have moved only slowly to support their political convictions with personal cheques.

COMPANIES HALT PARTY FUNDING

TORONTO (CP) — A fund-raiser for the federal Liberal party says it is unfair and unethical for many multinational corporations based in the United States to order their Canadian branch plants not to make political contributions in this country.

Joseph Cruden, Ontario chairman of the federal Liberal finance committee, said Thursday it is becoming increasingly difficult for the Liberal and the Progressive Conservative parties to collect money.

He said a primary reason for the difficulty is that U.S.-based multinationals are afraid of potential legal problems in the U.S. and do not want it even hinted that they influenced a political party in a foreign country.

"I can accept the decision of any Canadian company that they do not want to make a donation," Cruden said in an interview. "But what bothers me is when the decision not to give is made in another country."

Patrick Vernon, a Conservative party fund-raiser and a Toronto lawyer, said corporate donations to political parties have decreased in recent years.

The chairman and president of IBM Canada, Lorne Lodge, said Thursday that his corporation's Canadian board of directors discussed the possibility of making contributions, but decided to follow the recommendation of its head office, which was to make none.

Spokesmen for General Motors of Canada Ltd. and Goodyear Canada Inc. said their companies have stopped making political contributions in recent years.

Shuttle Bus Mixup Due to be Cleared

So you carefully checked the time schedule of the free shuttle bus, finished up your downtown shopping on the dot, made it to the bus stop with a few seconds to spare — and then waited for 45 minutes.

Well you're not the only one. Victoria Ald. Bill McElroy had the same experience, and so did Joe Richards, a local resident who's best known for his attendance record at city council meetings.

Richards brought the matter before council Thursday, and McElroy quickly added that he too had been inconvenienced.

McElroy said the shuttle bus doesn't run from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. as advertised, but from 10:45 to 3:50. The earlier times, he said, designate when the bus leaves and returns to the Hydro depot, which is most confusing for downtown shoppers.

Ald. Bill Tindall, who first brought the free shuttle bus proposal to council, said he is aware of the problem and assured all concerned the correct bus times will soon be posted at all stops.

Firm to Evaluate City Hall Workers

The personnel department at Victoria's city hall will undergo a study by an outside consultant despite charges by Ald. Larry Ryan that it might damage employee relations.

Ryan, chairman of council's personnel committee, told council Thursday the study by G.H. Newhouse and Associates Ltd. could do more harm than good to personnel relations.

The consulting firm will be paid about $5,000 to conduct a review of the personnel department and to evaluate the department's function.

"I'm totally opposed to this," said Ryan. "I find it abhorrent."

Ryan said if there are any problems with the operation of the personnel department they should be solved internally, with management and employees sitting down together and working things out.

"We should be very careful . . . about the notion that Madison Avenue experts can come in and tell us what we're doing wrong," said Ryan.

"We're saying that our own people are not competent to deal with the situation."

But Mayor Mike Young disagreed, saying he thinks an outside consultant will have an objective view. Young also said Newhouse has done work for city hall in the past and has been found to be excellent.

He added that the study is not a step towards disbanding the personnel department but a way of making it stronger.

Young said that over the years some aldermen have questioned the role of the personnel department and "I want to clear away once and for all any doubts . . . about what the function (of the department) is."

Ald. Bill McElroy supported the mayor, saying that "I don't see anything sinister in it."

He said it was a good time to review the function of the department.

Council later voted to award the contract to Newhouse.

Secrecy Shrouds Arrests in Big Rhodesian Swindle

SALISBURY (Reuter) — Six people have been arrested in connection with alleged currency offenses, Attorney General Brendon Treacy announced Thursday—breaking official silence on what political sources said might be Rhodesia's biggest financial scandal.

Three were detained under emergency powers regulations while allegations of fraud and contravention of exchange control laws were being investigated, he said in a statement.

Three others were freed on bail after a closed-door court hearing.

None of the six was named and no details of charges were disclosed.

The statement did not make clear whether all six were connected with the same case, but its appearance, hard on the heels of a public outcry over allegations of currency swindling in high places, indicated that they were.

Political sources said the justice ministry had come under political pressure to try to resolve the issue after rumors circulating in Salisbury for several days were made public Wednesday. The statement was the result, the sources said.

Treacy said official secrecy surrounding the arrests and court appearance was "purely and simply to protect the national interest, from the economic and security points of view, and for no oher reason."

He said all six eventually would face trial.

Sex Orgy Forced On Model

NEW YORK (AP) — Two men were held Thursday, accused of forcing a blonde model into a degrading, hours-long sex orgy, which they recorded on film. One of the pair was free on $125,000 cash bond in a similar case in New Jersey.

The victim was described by the New York district attorney's office as 19, and employed by one of the city's top agencies. Her picture has appeared on the cover of national magazines.

Arrested Thursday was Robert Jamgochian of Glenwood Lake, N.J. The other arrest made Wednesday night was that of Christopher Harris, 30, of New York.

The pair were charged with kidnapping, rape and sodomy, each of the three counts punishable upon conviction by a maximum 25 years in prison.

Two other men are being sought in the case.

Jamgochian already faces a 72-count state indictment in New Jersey, charging him with kidnapping and forcing Playboy bunnies, airline stewardesses and other young women to perform in pornographic films.

Blood Lack Delays Surgery

A blood shortage is delaying some elective surgery at Royal Jubilee and Victoria General Hospitals, a Red Cross House official said Thursday.

"B.C.'s blood bank is down to half the required levels in some blood groups and types," said Gerry Savage, who is in charge of blood donor clinics.

He estimated the shortage at about 500 pints.

"Since the start of the year there has been a shortage of donors," he said. "The shortage has been building up and now seems to have reached its peak due to summer holidays. Many of our regular donors are away."

Savage hopes enough donors will turn up at clinics in Victoria and Sidney next week.

He said no time will be lost in shipping donations to the laboratory. Normally, this is done after a clinic closes, but next week scheduled commercial flights will carry blood to the laboratory while clinics are still in progress.

"This will shorten the normal time between donation and arrival at the laboratory to permit processing for plasma fractions," he said.

The clinics will be held Monday at Red Cross House, 1046 Fort, from 2:30 to 8 p.m.; Tuesday, Sanscha Hall, Sidney, from 2 to 8 p.m.; Wednesday, UVic Student Union Building, 10 a.m. — 4 p.m.; Thursday, HMCS Naden, base gymnasium 9:30 a.m. — 3:30 p.m.; Friday, HMCS Provider, 9 a.m. — 3 p.m.

The Friday clinic is sponsored by the Ships of Canada's Pacific Fleet.

Hewitt Finds Deficiency In Feds' Farm Aid Plan

Agriculture Minister Jim Hewitt says B.C. farmers would get less help in difficult times under a proposed federal farm assurance scheme than they do now under the province's existing program.

In a telephone interview from the agricultural ministers' meeting in Yorkton, Sask., Hewitt said that under the plan, the support price of a product would be its current cash cost plus the average difference between market receipts and cash costs in the preceding five years.

He said the province has objected to the proposal because it would apparently only allow a single level of assistance for crops on a national basis.

Hewitt said B.C. would like to see a provision for regional cost differences to be taken into account, with three-way funding between the federal government, the provinces and participating producers.

The minister said Ontario and Quebec, which like B.C. have major farm assurance schemes, supported B.C.'s stand at the meeting that the provincial programs "top load" on top of the national program.

Council Pinpoints Research Areas

The newly-created B.C. Science Council identified at its recent inaugural meeting six key areas where research should be concentrated in the province, William Armstrong, secretary to the council, said Thursday.

"The areas discussed were forest and ocean resources, coal, transportation, communications and the environment," Armstrong said in a news release.

He said the council will continue its discussion and expects to make specific recommendations to Education Minister Pat McGeer soon on the structure and activities of a coal research institute, an innovation centre for inventors and several aspects of forest research.

Armstrong said the council will work closely with McGeer and the B.C. Development Corp. to encourage the development of a discovery park — an assembly of industrial research laboratories located on or near a university campus.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

Drinking drivers fattened the public purse with more than $3,000 for the second day in a row Thursday in provincial court's No. 1 courtroom.

Eight drivers admitted their guilt before Judge Fred Green and were fined $3,300. Nine drivers paid $3,775 Wednesday.

And that isn't the end of the matter for them. All automatically lost their driving licence for a minimum three months, or a minimum six months if there was an accident. And nearly all of them must also take the impaired drivers course — one evening a week for a month at the Law Courts.

The highest fine was $1,000 for Bruce Keith Hollett, 26, a deckhand who provided two addresses — 1-2426 Quadra and 820 Colville. He pleaded guilty to driving while his blood-alcohol content was over .08, his second such offence. He blew .21 and .19 on the breathalyzer.

Hollett was trying to park his car May 20 when it collided with a parked car on Tillicum near Hampton.

The lowest fine was $50 for John Percival Robert Johnson, 17, of 2991 Austin. He was placed on probation for six months and ordered to perform 100 hours of community service work.

Court was told he lost control on a corner in his parent's car and had an accident. The car was written off but he will be buying his parents another car.

Johnson blew .17 and .15 on the breath machine.

Also fined in Courtroom No. 1 for drinking-driving offences were: Frank Almond, 66, of 405-1655 Chambers, $350 and six months probation; Lloyd Erdman, 19, of 106-1000 Esquimalt, $500, six months probation and no driving for six months; Brian Archibald McCulloch, 17, of 930 Ardmore, $450 and six months probation; Jose Pacheco, 29, of 2813 Adelaide, $100, six months probation and 150 hours of community service work; Michael James Jacob, 19, of Edmonton, $350; Patrick George Whelan, 49, of 2280 Amherst, $500 and six months probation.

Film Industry Crime Probed

LOS ANGELES (Reuter) — A United States prosecutor Thursday announced an investigation into "white collar crime"—the manipulating of stocks and accounts—in the Hollywood entertainment industry.

District Attorney John Van De Kamp announced the investigation two weeks after former Columbia Pictures studio chief David Begelman was fined $5,000 and placed on probation after pleading no contest to charges that he forged studio cheques for $40,000.

One of the cheques was made out in the name of actor Cliff Robertson, who later called for an investigation into white collar crime in the film industry.

Van De Kamp said Thursday a group of lawyers and investigators had been formed to study the extent of criminal activities within the industry.

"Our concern has been raised by the Begelman, Lisner and Deluxe Film Laboratory incidents," he said.

Van De Kamp said that earlier this month his staff was looking for Audrey Lisner, 41-year-old accounting director for Screen Gems, accused of embezzling more than $250,000 dollars from the studio.

His office also is studying the possible embezzlement of $1 million from Deluxe Film Laboratory, a subsidiary of 20th Century Fox.

Begelman, who produced a series of successful pictures for Columbia, was suspended after the cheque incident first came to light.

He was taken back by his studio briefly before resigning in a glare of publicity. He is still on Columbia Pictures payroll as an independent film producer with a contract expected to bring him $300,000 a year.

Critics of the film industry have demanded in the past that prosecutors investigate the percentage profit system and the distribution of films.

They claimed that film stars who accepted a relatively low salary and a percentage of a film's profits had sometimes found part of the profits had been watered into other channels.

DOCTORS SEW SEVERED ARMS

SEATTLE (AP) — A man whose right arm was severed and his left arm left hanging by a shred after he was caught by a mixing machine was reported in satisfactory condition Thursday following a 12-hour operation to re-attach the limbs.

Delores Reagan, assistant director of nursing services at St. Joseph Hospital, said Jose Renteria, 24, of Centralia, Wash., is heavily sedated and is being fed liquids intravaneously.

The three doctors who performed the emergency operation said they preferred to remain unidentified. But one said he is "very optimistic about his (Renteria's) ultimate physical recovery."

Renteria, a parts manager, was taken to the hospital shortly after noon Wednesday after the arms were cut while he was cleaning a spice-mixing vat at Johnny's Enterprises Inc.

"The right arm was completely severed and brought in as a separate member and was immediately iced by emergency room personnel to keep it viable," one of the surgeons said.

"We've made a valiant effort and that's all we can say right now. Things look promising."

The doctor said it would be a week to 10 days before they can determine whether blood flow is re-established in the limbs. It would be months before it is determined whether the bones will knit properly, and as long as two years before the surgeons have some indication whether Renteria can use his arms.

Ford Empire Dethrones Heir

DETROIT (AP) — Lee Iacocca has been fired as president of Ford Motor Co. little more than a year after his 32-year rise through the ranks of the world's second-largest auto-maker was derailed in a corporate shakeup.

Ford's board of directors voted unanimously Thursday to remove the 54-year-old Iacocca from the presidency of the auto company, said William Clay Ford, one of the firm's top executives and brother of board chairman Henry Ford II.

Iacocca could not be reached for comment. But the industry publication Automotive News quoted him as saying: "There was no reason. He (Henry Ford II) and Bill (Ford) and I sat there and he just said he came to that conclusion and that's it."

After joining the auto company in 1946 as an engineering trainee and later switching to sales, Iacocca shot to the top. He had been considered the likely successor when Henry Ford II, 61, steps down as chief executive in 1980.

But industry insiders said Iacocca had become too visible and agressive to suit Ford's tastes. "Lee is like a Medici prince," one lieutenant said. "He created his own city-state within the company."

Iacocca won his way into Henry Ford's graces as the marketing genius behind the 1964 introduction of the Mustang, Detroit's first low-priced sporty car.

Explosion Foils Plans

NEW YORK (AP) — A pipe bomb explosion which shattered a Queens apartment occurred in what appeared to be a command post for the Puerto Rican terrorist group FALN and may have prevented a series of bombings Wednesday night, police and the FBI said Thursday.

One man was critically injured in the explosion Wednesday afternoon, and law enforcement sources said they believe he is a member of the National Commission of the Episcopal Church for Hispanic Affairs which has been suspected as an FALN front.

Beatles Bugged Elvis, Paper Says

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Post says an internal FBI memo says singer Elvis Presley eight years ago volunteered to become an FBI informant, but the document does not say he ever volunteered any information to the agency.

The Post says that the memo also showed that Presley, who died last year, expressed disgust about the influence the Beatles and some other entertainers were having over U.S. youth.

The memo, written Dec. 31, 1970 by M. A. Jones of the FBI crime records divison to Thomas Bishop, at the time assistant FBI director, was made public under the Freedom of Information Act.

On that date Presley came to Washington to meet then-President Richard Nixon and accept an award for his work against drug abuse. Previous accounts have reported that, during that meeting, Presley volunteered to help the Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs.

The Post says the Jones memo quoted Presley as blaming the Beatles' "filthy unkempt appearances and suggestive music" for many problems facing young people.

In addition, The Post says, the FBI official said Presley "advised that the Smothers brothers, Jane Fonda and other persons in the entertainment industry of their ilk have a lot to answer for in the hereafter for the way they have poisoned young minds by disparaging the United States in public statements and unsavory activities."

DEMETER HEARING

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — Peter Demeter told a judicial hearing Thursday that his former housekeeper is prepared to testify she saw Csaba Szilagyi with well-known prison escapee Laszlo Eper just weeks before Demeter's wife was found bludgeoned to death in her garage.

Demeter, found guilty of arranging the murder of his wife, Christine, revealed at the hearing in the maximum-security Millhaven penitentiary that Eper was allegedly seen with Demeter's former best friend Szilagyi in a Toronto dentist's office by housekeeper Klara Majersky.

Brew Helped Carter's Mother Nurse

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's mother drank three bottles of home brew while nursing youngest son Billy and doesn't ever intend to "rot" in a rocking chair.

"I had three babies and I nursed them all but when Billy was born I kind of gave out of milk," Lillian Carter told an informal meeting of the U.S. Congress interested in the problems of hunger and population planning.

"Then my father had a solution. Home brew. We couldn't get beer. And I drank three bottles of home brew every day. Believe me, Billy got plenty of milk."

On the subject of retirement, Mrs. Carter said: "I preach against retiring. I haven't retired and I'm going to be 80 in August. I know you're not surprised. I know I look it. But my mind is a lot younger than 79."

MONTREAL — "I'm no longer a hot-shot climber," says Sir Edmund Hillary, who in 1953 became the first man to reach the summit of Mount Everest. "Never was one, really." Hillary, 58, made the comments Thursday during a stopover in Montreal to raise funds for building hospitals and schools for his Sherpa friends in the Himalayan foothills.

NEWPORT, R.I. — Louise Vanderbilt, heiress to one of the largest fortunes in the U.S., joined about 50 other Newport residents this week in a march favoring a rent control ordinance.

Mrs. Vanderbilt, widow of Cornelius Vanderbilt's grandson George, Mrs. Vanderbilt said she has been renting two apartments for a total of $950 a month for two apartments and that her landlord had raised the rent by $1,000 each. "It is outrageous and unconscionable," she said.

MOUNT KISCO, N.Y. — Actor Hume Cronyn was handcuffed and locked in the basement of his home while an armed man and woman attempted to steal his paintings and art works, it was reported Thursday. Also locked up with Cronyn were his secretary and a real estate agent trying to sell the actor's 22-acre, $790,000 estate. The robbery failed when the trio freed themselves from their bonds and escaped through a back door.

Reaction Favorable To Teacher Report

VANCOUVER (CP) — Educators throughout British Columbia have reacted favorably to the report of a provincially-appointed committee studying teacher education.

The five-member committee toured B.C. last fall gathering public opinion on current teacher-training programs.

Educators say they agree with the report's call for probationary periods for teachers before permanent teaching certificates are awarded; renewal of certificates after an absence of five years from the profession and the establishment of continuing education centres throughout the province.

However, Pat Brady, president of the B.C. Teachers' Federation, said while the report included recommendations the federation made last fall it "failed to give weight to some of our other proposals. We will be taking a hard look at the report over the summer."

Dean Norma Mickleson of the University of Victoria faculty of education said that copies of the report were made available in advance to her, Dr. John Andrews, dean of education at the University of B.C., and Dr. George Ivany, dean of education at Simon Fraser University.

She said they found some parts of the report commendable, while other recommendations were totally unacceptable.

They felt that suggested qualifications for special education teachers were too strict and they were not satisfied with the recommended makeup of the Council for the Education of Teachers and the Board of Certification.

Mickleson said that a claim of the report that university course descriptions are "often incomprehensible even to teachers and professors" was overstating the case.

The B.C. School Trustees Association refused to comment on the report until its teachers' education committee studies it.

Two committee members were in disagreement with one part of the report.

Rubymae Parrott, a vice-president of the BCSTA, said she disagreed with a claim by committee chairman Malcolm McGregor that graduate programs could not successfully be offered off campus.

TOO MANY PICKERS

KELOWNA (CP) — Fruit growers in the Fraser Valley are suffering from a shortage of pickers, but Okangan fruit growers say they have more pickers than they need.

"In fact, we've got five people for every job," Arnold Pederson, chairman of the Tree Fruit Marketing Board, said. "The only problem here is the weather."

Richard Bullock, president of the British Columbia Fruit Growers Association, said reports of shortages are isolated, and in those cases it is usually the farmer who is at fault because of the way he treats his workers.

Fraser Valley fruit growers said earlier this week that their berries are rotting on the vine because they cannot find enough pickers. They say people can make more money on unemployment insurance benefits than they could working in the fields.

Flawed Valves In B.C.

VANCOUVER (CP) — About 80 artificial heart valves with a design flaw have been implanted here and are not causing any undue problems, said Dr. J. A. Osborne, director of cardiology at Vancouver General Hospital.

Toronto General Hospital has notified 47 patients who underwent valve implants that the valves are wearing out sooner than expected.

"We have known this for the past five years and it is not a situation to panic about," Osborne said. "There are still a few of these valves around and they show inconsistent wear."

He said persons with the artificial valves get regular checkups from their family doctors and cardiologists who are aware of the condition of the valves.

Osborne said none of the model 104 Beall mitral valves have been implanted here since 1972.

The Belfry Musical Tribute to Leyshon

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

There were people at The Belfry Thursday night who had been the round of the summer's light entertainment currently available in this city.

In fact it was a typical audience of first-nighters and the consensus, as the lights finally faded on The Belfry production of Dames at Sea, was that the musical is definitely tops on the Victoria scene.

Dames is a spoof of the 1930s musicals with a tip of the hat to the period's famous dancer, Ruby Keeler, to Busby Berkeley and all those movie plots that hinged on the talented little girl from the sticks who miraculously saves the show and becomes a Broadway star overnight.

In fact, the stand-out line in a mile of delightful cliches comes when Joan (Sheila McCarthy) says to Ruby (Sidonie Boll) who is having an attack of nerves, "You may go out there a chorus girl but you'll come back a star!"

Which she does — of course.

In a nutshell — almost any nutshell would contain it — the story concerns a cast meeting a variety of troubles that includes a troublesome star with a vamp complex.

All troubles are capped as opening night looms and before the cast gets a chance to bring down the house the wreckers move in with the same objective.

Thanks to two sailor boyfriends and the star's recollections of a sultry episode with their captain, the whole show is transferred to the poopdeck of a USN battleship with results already noted.

Glynis Leyshon, better known in Victoria as an extremely talented actress-comedienne and a capable PR lady for Bastion Theatre, emerges from her first year at the Vancouver Playhouse Theatre School, showing every promise of being equally successful in the director's role.

Her innate sense of comedy serves Dames well. The beautifully mounted show — hats off to resident designer Ken MacDonald — brims with imaginative touches and impishly appropriate comic ideas.

Achieving the effect of a "production number" with a cast of six calls for considerable invention and wit and such distinct highlight items as Singapore Sue and Raining in My Heart, prove that Leyshon has it on both counts.

There are unevennesses in the cast and at times a flabbiness in the texture of a scene, like a fabric in which the threads are woven too slackly. There has not developed fully yet among the cast, the compact ensemble sense that a show of this kind must have to be a total success.

The most striking performances are those of Hank Stinson in two roles — as Hennessey, the show's producer, and the Captain; Sheila McCarthy, highly gifted in comedy and an eyeful when she dances, and Bruce-Eric Smith, a zesty stylish performer who radiates personality.

It is regrettable that Sidonie Boll — pretty and petite — does not have a chance to show off her principal talent until late in the show, but when she does the Star Tar tap number as part of the finale, she fairly sizzles, displaying tremendous verve and a faultless technique.

Robert Carey, on the other hand, does his best work at the start of the show with his duet with Ruby and his Broadway Baby number. Connie Martin has not quite found firm ground in the role of the throaty-voiced prehensile feline star, Mona Kent, but her Beguine number with the Captain was distinctly promising.

This is a professional company, with well paced musical accompaniment by pianist Lloyd Nicholson and percussionist George Dixon; the staging is fully professional, the costuming and detail immaculate in all but one small but glaringly wrong item — Stinson, so versatilely gifted and with the only good singing voice in the company, flaws the pristine grooming of the show with his shaggy hair looking horribly out of place beneath his captain's hat — in the '30s yet! We hope this error will be corrected before the show ends Sept. 2.

Smelter Shutdown Averted

TRAIL (CP) — Striking civic workers at this west Kootenay community promised on Thursday they will not picket Cominco Ltd., averting a threatened shutdown at the lead-zinc smelter.

The 75 workers, members of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, have been on strike against the city of Trail since February.

The union was upset with the actions of a Trail alderman employed at Cominco who recently carried out repairs to city waterworks equipment after vandals damaged it.

Ed Peck, LRB vice-chairman, said the board was prepared to issue a restraint order against the civic workers, but that such an order was no longer necessary.

McCarthy Due Back Saturday

VANCOUVER (CP) — Irishman Patrick Vincent McCarthy, deported from here earlier this week, is being held in a holding area in Amsterdam and will be returned to Canada Saturday, McCarthy's lawyer said Thursday.

John Taylor, who accompanied McCarthy to Amsterdam, said in a telephone interview that Dutch officials decided McCarthy could not remain in Holland but he could not be sent on to Ireland either.

Taylor said the change in McCarthy's fortunes came when three escorting immigration officers attempted to keep him in handcuffs while at Amsterdam.

He said that after a Dutch lawyer made representations to Dutch authorities on McCarthy's behalf, the authorities decided that "the Canadians had no official status in Holland and ordered the cuffs removed."

The lawyer said Canadian immigration officials later tried to put McCarthy on a plane to Ireland, but he refused to board.

Taylor said the immigration officers then made arrangements with the Dutch to have McCarthy returned to Canada.

He said Canada was attempting to use the Immigration Act illegally in place of the Extradition Act to remove McCarthy from the country. He said McCarthy should either be released when he is returned to Canada or the Federal Court should dispose of his case.

Halifax Cruises Cancelled

HALIFAX (CP) — The controversial cruise liner America will not be returning to Halifax, its local agent said today.

Chris Mathers, travel manager for Mathers Travel Ltd., said today his company was notified Thursday that Venture Cruise Lines of New York has cancelled all nine remaining cruises to Nova Scotia.

However, he said Venture Cruise Lines told him the ship's "Voyage to Nowhere" cruises would continue.

"But I have a feeling they are shutting everything down," Mathers aid.

MOORE NOT GUILTY OF LOITERING

CORNER BROOK, Nfld. (CP) — Patrick Moore, president of the Greenpeace Foundation, and photographer Rex Weyler were acquitted today on charges of loitering and obstruction which were filed in March at St. Anthony, Nfld., during the annual seal hunt.

Magistrate Gordon Seabright handed down the verdict shortly after lawyers for the Crown and defence presented final summations in provincial magistrates court here.

The two men were charged by RCMP after they went to a motel room in St. Anthony which was being used as a temporary fisheries office for the hunt.

The men had testified they were seeking answers to questions about the hunt including whether or not they would get permission to visit the hunt area.

Moore and Greenpeace lawyer Peter Ballem are to appear in court here Monday to face charges of interfering with the seal hunt.

Firestone 500 Failure Rocks Sooke Couple

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Things that go bump in the night are not nearly as frightening as those that go thump in the daylight, especially when driving along the highway.

"We couldn't figure out what was banging," said Charles Richardson of Sooke. "We thought maybe it was something in the glove compartment.

"We stopped the car to investigate and discovered our front left tire was coming apart. It was peeling away and the pieces were thumping against the fender."

"I was terrified," added Mrs. Richardson. "It was about 200 feet down to the river on the left. If the tire had blown, we'd have been finished."

The couple was driving home after visiting relatives in Grande Prairie, Alberta, and were near Edson, heading towards Jasper, when the tire came apart.

It didn't blow but it had to be replaced with the spare.

"My tires are Firestone 500s and after reading in the papers about the problems they are having in the United States, I thought I should report this. It is happening here."

In the U.S., hearings are being held by Congress to determine whether the Firestone 500 tire should be recalled by the company.

Rep. John Moss (D-Calif.), House investigations subcommittee chairman, said there is a clear indication of a safety problem.

The committee will decide whether to order a recall after a public hearing Aug. 7.

There are more than 13 million Firestone 500 tires being used in North America. The company says there is no evidence to justify recalling all 13 million tires.

Richardson said his tires had gone about 40,000 miles in four years.

"The tires came with the car when I bought it."

Richardson said the tires seemed fine before he left on the trip to Grande Prairie. Also he had the wheels aligned so the problem couldn't be there.

There was no advance warning of trouble before the tire started coming apart.

Richardson said the tires retail at $70 each. He has been offered a new one at $38.

But he's thinking about getting all four tires replaced.

"Having a tire unravel when you're driving on the highway is not something you forget in a hurry," he said.

Mayor Socks Rocks

If it was a lacrosse game, Mayor Mike Young probably would have been penalized for slashing, but what he did to the Victoria Shamrocks at Thursday's council meeting was perfectly legal.

Young took a recommendation that the club be given about $1,100 for a road trip and hacked it to $500.

The team was almost home-free on its grant bid, having already won support from council's finance committee, when it ran into Young's body-check.

"I can understand the enthusiasm of the committee in supporting the Shamrocks because they're doing a fantastic job," said the mayor, ". . . but if we subsidize their transportation costs it's going to cause gross problems and dilemmas in the future."

He said other sports organizations would soon be knocking on the door but the money to support them just wouldn't be there.

The Shamrocks had asked for the $1,100 to help pay their way to the Commonwealth Games in Edmonton this summer.

Ald. Murray Glazier, chairman of the finance committee, said he felt the club should get the money because it could help promote Victoria while visiting Edmonton and also because the Rocks contribute to the city financially through home game receipts.

Council rejected the suggestion of an $1,100 grant, however, and later voted to accept a motion to award the squad $500.

That, said Young, was as generous as he could get.

Clinic Children Could Be First Lottery Losers

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

A summer education program for handicapped children could be the first victim of the lottery war between Ottawa and Victoria.

All funds for the program, $22,000 a year, come from provincial lottery ticket sales.

But Ottawa is moving into the lottery business in a big way in November and Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy says this could mean the end of the provincial sales.

Deryck Thomson, administrator of the G.R. Pearkes Clinic for Handicapped Children, today said the end of provincial lottery revenues would be a severe blow to the clinic.

"Our only source of funds for the summer program is through provincial lottery sales by our women's auxiliary. This program is important and we hope it will be able to continue."

Handicapped students get therapy and schooling at the clinic from September to June but some of the students require this program during July and August as well, Thomson said.

The clinic is one of 40 non-profit organizations in the Victoria area funded through lottery sales. The provincial tickets raise about $430,000 here annually for charity.

Thomson calls the battle between Ottawa and Victoria "unfortunate and confusing."

Without judging the merits of arguments on both sides, he said it is clear that the provincial ticket program is of great benefit to hundreds of B.C. organizations.

"The jurisdictional problem will be resolved soon, I suspect, and I hope the provincial program can continue."

The 40 Victoria organizations funded through provincial ticket sales include service clubs, hospital auxiliaries and other non-profit groups. They are working to assist senior citizens, handicapped children, hospitals and amateur sports.

Across B.C. there are 275 organizations with 800,000 members selling provincial lottery tickets. More than half the total membership is involved in amateur sport programs at all age levels.

The lottery battle is between the federal government, which will be installing its Loto Canada ticket machines in B.C. this fall, and the province-run lotteries, the Express and Provincial.

McCarthy said the machines will greatly increase the sales of the federal tickets and could finish the provincial lotteries by year's end.

She will ask Premier Bennett to protest to Prime Minister Trudeau at a first ministers conference beginning Aug. 7.

McCarthy is also organizing petitions for the premier to take to Trudeau at the conference. The petitions would ask Ottawa to withdraw from the lottery scene by the end of 1979. She said the federal government in 1977 indicated it would not continue in the lottery business beyond the end of next year without the consent of the provinces.

However, only Nova Scotia has consented and still Ottawa is planning to stay in the lottery game on a permanent basis, she said.

Under the Criminal Code, Ottawa retains prior rights to lotteries.

'LITTLE ANYONE CAN DO'

Subtrades Face Impasse

The general contractor on the federal government's new Ocean Sciences building at Pat Bay refused today to reply to complaints he is withholding money owing several sub-trades.

"No comment," was all Greg Cabana, manager of Wessex Construction Co. Ltd. would say.

On Thursday Saanich Tory MP Donald Munro said he'd try to help the subtrades get money coming to them.

But he said he is being frustrated by bureaucratic red tape.

The federal department of public works, owners of the building, have refused to give Wessex its final payment until the creditors are satisfied.

A spokesman for Cana Construction, management contractor on the project, said there is only one case where the government would pay the subtrades directly — if Wessex filed for bankruptcy.

But if Wessex decides to do nothing, he said, there is little anyone can do.

The company is registered at the provincial companies office and lists Cabana's wife, Margaret Ellen Cabana, as president, secretary and sole director.

The Cabanas have eight other companies registered at the office, including Cabana Coach, Cabana Holding, Cabana Homes and Development, Cabana Imports, Canada Investments, Cabana Properties, Cabana Structures and Cabana Trucking.

The Cana spokesman said there is no simple answer.

Ed Gait, owner of GWG Rentals, one of the subtrades involved, blamed much of the problem on the way the federal government is tendering large construction projects.

He said the government puts the onus on the general contractor to clear up outstanding accounts and does not shoulder any responsibility itself.

"The sub-trades are being caught in the middle," he said.

He said if he as owner were building a house he'd be responsible for the accounts of subtrades in the event his general contractor didn't pay.

"Why shouldn't the federal government be made responsible too?"

Annie Loses Mast But Pushes Ahead

The Victoria yacht Annie Cadby, owned by Louis Lindholm of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club, has lost its mast in the Victoria-Maui sailing classic but is battling on.

A race committee official from the Royal Vancouver Yacht Club said the vessel was sailing in trade winds of between 15 and 20 knots when her spinnaker pole dipped in the water, putting great pressure on the Swan 44's mast.

The spokesman said Lindholm and his crew have jury-rigged the mast but the speed of the boat has been reduced to an average of 4.4 knots in the last two days.

Up until the mishap, the Annie Cadby had been doing well in her division but is now not expected to reach Maui until Tuesday or Wednesday.

The Annie Cady is 475 miles from Maui.

Three boats have completed the race.

The first to cross the finish line was Doug Fryer's Merlin of the Seattle Yacht Club, who finished Tuesday morning.

About 12 hours later she was followed by Warren Hinton's Drifter of the Lahaina Yacht Club. Third boat to finish was Irving Loube's Bravura, also of Lahaina.

Talks Continuing In Theatre Dispute

A meeting was under way today in a continuing effort to avert a strike by projectionists employed by Odeon and Famous Players theatres in B.C.

Neither management nor union spokesmen were available for comment this morning.

The 113 projectionists served 72-hour strike notice Tuesday and, according to the B.C. Projectionists' Union, were legally entitled to strike at noon today.

The two main issues in dispute are wages and job security.

If a strike did occur, all but two movie theatres in Victoria would be closed — the Towne on Douglas and the Quadra at Quadra and Hillside.

Stock It to the Punks!

Out there somewhere there's a body brooding about vandals.

This poor soul — he or she didn't dare go public — sent in a clipping to us from Britain's Daily Telegraph. We suspect our anonymous mailer agrees with some of the suggestions offered by children who participated in a contest run by the Sussex county police.

The kids were asked how vandalism should be combatted.

The youngsters, God bless their bloodthirsty little hearts, offered up ideas ranging from shaving vandals' heads to dying their hair green. By and large, the children shrugged off the idea of fines and proposed instead "humiliating" physical punishment, including a return of the stocks, public birching and naming young offenders in the press.

But why stop there? How about hangings . . . maybe burnings at the stake . . .?

Traffic engineers speak in a language all their own and usually it takes municipal politicians years before they understand what's being said. But sometimes even old pros like Ald. Ron McKenzie are thrown.

At a city council meeting Thursday McKenzie looked at the terms of reference for a Douglas-Blanshard corridor study — and then he looked again.

McKenzie drew council's attention to the fact that the traffic consultants being hired to do the study would be asked to determine "a realistic range of 'external' transportation assumptions; e.g., modal-split expectations for the movements influenced by the corridor and traffic generated for lands outside the immediate area of the corridor."

McKenzie scratched his head and said: "Quite frankly I think that's a bunch of jibberish."

"But that was in laymans' terms," said a helpful Ald. Bob Wright.

We can hardly wait to hear the technical language. By the way, seen any good modal-splits lately?

For most Victorians today may be Friday and the start of a pleasant summer weekend of barbecuing, boating and wishing for an end to the beer strike.

Another B marks this day, the 189th anniversary of the storming of the feared Bastille prison in Paris which touched off the French revolution. Formal celebrations may be hard to find, but at midnight most of Victoria's French restaurateurs and the French staff of other establishments will gather at Stewart's in Market Square to commemorate the day.

Vive la France!

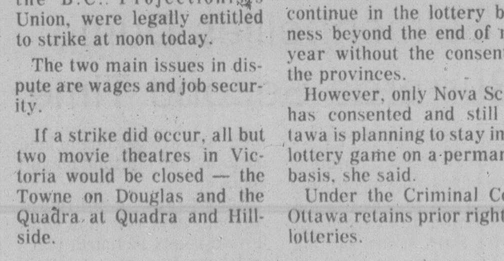
An ad placed in the Times on Saturday by St. John's Anglican Church extends a special welcome to visitors and residents from Manitoba.

The occasion: Manitoba Sunday.

The problem: those typographical gremlins.



Somehow, the church with the green spire came out in print as the church with the green spite.

The advertising department hopes its gremlins will be forgiven.

Waste-makers are legion in some areas of the federal civil service but believe it or not, Town Talk has found one of the people's servants who has his eye on saving the taxpayers' bucks.

His name — Ron Wood.

Recently Wood, assistant director of information for the Metric Commission, sent a letter to the Times saying he feels there are too many people on the nation's dailies receiving press releases and publications issued by the commission.

He suggested one per paper is enough. It'd be less costly and more efficient, too, he said.

A fervent Amen from us and we hope others follow his example.

Budgets Get Battle

Victoria Budgets swept an exhibition doubleheader against the Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League to avenge last year's loss before about 600 fans Thursday night at Royal Athletic Park.

Budgets, who bowed 1-0 to the All-Stars last season, took the opener 2-0 on a four-hitter by Dave Wilson and won the second game 5-0 on a three-hitter by Andy Konopacki.

Wilson struck out eight batters and only walked two. Bob Holness scored the first run for Budgets on an error in the fourth inning and Alden Govenlock singled in Bob Burrows for the other tally in the sixth.

Konopacki, who struck out nine and walked none, backed his own pitching with a bases-empty home run. Budgets managed only four hits off the pitching combination of Ron Fedosenko and Ken Fox but made them count.

Burrows bashed a two-run homer in the fourth frame and Randy Benn tripled in Dave Williams and Burrows in the sixth.

Budgets meet Seattle Peterbilt, leaders of the Norwest League, in two doubleheaders, Saturday at 7 p.m., and Sunday at 11:30 a.m., at Athletic Park.

In regular Stuffy McGinnis play, Bateson's Karate School picked up their second victory of the season, beating Elks 3-2 at Central Park.

Al Strandlund gave up eight hits, including bases-empty homers to Alf Hass and Glen Wallis, but went the distance for the victory.

Pat Strandlund scored twice on two hits and Wayne Toms singled and scored once.

In Heywood Men's League play, Hygrade Radio blanked Webb and Trace 6-0 at Heywood Avenue Park.

Victoria Skylarks downed MacDonald's Furniture 5-3 and Butler Brothers defeated Victoria Athletics 11-6 in Victoria Senior Women's League games at Hyacinth Park.

Esks Do as Expected

EDMONTON (CP) — There were no suprises for Jack Gotta when his Calgary Stampeders were turfed out of Clarke Stadium 33-14 by Edmonton Eskimos Thursday night in their Canadian Football League season opener—except maybe the score.

"We had some things going, some things available to us," said the puzzled Calgary coach. "But we just never seemed to get the chance to get cranked up, get back in there."

Gotta was frustrated because he knew exactly what to expect.

Tom Wilkinson, Edmonton's seven-year veteran quarterback, would move the Eskimos smartly downfield with tried-and-true techniques, hitting receivers for short sideline passes and using the run to set up occassional long gainers by air.

"That's what their thing is . . . when they play that kind of control passing game," said Gotta. "We thought they'd do it, and they did it and did it well."

Wilkinson, who played 2½ quarters, masterminded Edmonton's three touchdowns, all in the first half.

He hit slotback Tom Scott with a 14-yard touchdown pass at 9:10 of the first quarter and in the second quarter twice marched the Eskimos up the Calgary goal-line, with Jim Germany running in touchdowns from the one- and five-yard lines.

Dave Cutler began another run at the CFL scoring championship with three field goals from 27, 33 and 31 yards, three converts and a single on a missed 47-yard field goal.

Salmonbellies Dump Burrards Second Time

NEW WESTMINSTER — New Westminster Salmonbellies edged Vancouver Burrards for the second straight time Thursday night at Queen's Park Arena, posting a 15-13 decision to climb to within five points of leading Victoria Shamrocks in the Western Lacrosse Association race.

Salmonbellies are now three points ahead of Burrards and Nanaimo Timbermen, who are battling to hold on to one of the four playoff spots.

Last-place Coquitlam Adanacs have closed to within five points of fourth place and have five games left in the regular schedule.

Mitton Upsets Ashe

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — South African Bernie Mitton upset top-seeded Arthur Ashe of the United States, 6-4, 6-4, in the Hall of Fame tennis championships Thursday, frustrating the former Wimbledon champion with a near-perfect serve and volley game.

Mitton now goes against seventh-seeded Bob Giltinan of Australia, a 6-4, 6-3 winner over Russell Simpson of New Zealand.

Cary Carries Big Bat

EUGENE, Ore. — Cary Hornaman responded to the knock of opportunity Thursday night and played the leading role in helping Eugene Emeralds to an 8-5 triumph over Victoria Mussels in Northwest League baseball action.

Hornaman, a .130 hitter given a rare chance to play, keyed a six-run fourth inning with a three-run homer.

Victoria was leading 3-1 when starting-pitcher Frank Lucarelli loaded the bases by issuing two walks and hitting another batter. A single and a sacrifice fly brought in one run each before Hornaman connected with a 325-yard shot to left field.

Then, with Don Rogelstad relieving, Adolpho Feliz reached base on an error by Victoria-manager Jim Chapman at third base, stole second and scored the sixth run of the inning on a double by Dave Hoensine.

Victoria opened the game with a three-run first inning.

After Mussels had loaded the bases against Eugene starter Brad Lesley, Paul Kirsch drew a walk to force in the first run. Catcher Jim Thamann then followed with a single to drive in his sixth and seventh runs of the season.

The loss was the eighth in nine road games and the fourth to Emeralds in five meetings between the clubs. Mussels are now 7-15 over-all

The win boosted Eugene's record to 15-8 and maintained their lead over Bend Timberhawks at one game in the Southern Division.

The two teams meet again here tonight.

In other league action, Bellingham combined a nine-hit attack with seven Salem errors for a 7-2 victory, and gained a game on Walla Walla in the Northern Division race, as the Padres were falling 8-2 to Timberhawks.

When the smoke cleared, Walla Walla still clung to a one-half game edge over Bellingham, but Grays Harbor was only three games back after a doubleheader victory over hapless Boise, 5-3 and 13-5.

OLDEST TO WIN OPEN?

Arnie Plays in Hope

St.ANDREWS, Scotland (AP) — Despite a catastrophe at the hole he hates most in the whole world, Arnold Palmer still has a chance to become the oldest golfer ever to win the British Open.

When the tournament ends Saturday, Palmer will be 48 years, 10 months old. Tom Morris, with his Victorian whiskers and hickory spoons and niblicks, was 46-plus when he won the Open in 1867.

Morris is a hallowed local legend, born and bred in this pretty old university town beside the sea. He is still the oldest man to carry off the coveted title. His gold shop has been standing beside the 18th green of the old course for 132 years.

Palmer finished the second round Thursday at two-under-par 142 and only three shots behind the leaders-Severiano Ballesteros of Spain, Isao Aoki of Japan and Ben Crenshaw of the United States. But he would have been even with them if he had not gone astray at his old enemy, the par-four 17th hole called the Road Hole.He drove out of bounds, put his next shot into deep rough and then had to hack his way out of a bunker.

"I finished with a good putt and a magnificent seven," Palmer said.

Reporters covering the tournament have a new problem-they need interpreters. Aoki speaks no English at all, and Ballesteros speaks very little.

Like Palmer, Ballesteros drove out of bounds at the 17th, lost a stroke and had to take his tee shot again.

"The second time I say 'Go straight,'' and he go straight," said the Spaniard. "I make a good drive. I feel I make a four, but I make a six.

"That hole is more difficult because they put the pin so close to the edge. Maybe tomorrow they make the hole right off the green-I don't know."

Aoki and the other joint leader, Crenshaw, both tamed the 17th with par fours. Ballesteros shot a second-round 70, Aoki had 71 and Crenshaw fired a solid 69. Bob Shearer of Australia and Briton Garry Cullen were at 140, and Watson, Tom Kite, Tom Weiskopf, Bob Byman and Tsuneyki Nakajima of Japan were in a bunch at 141.

"There's a lot to be reckoned with out there," said Crenshaw, a golf historian. As a boy, he spent hours studying maps and diagrams of this centuries-old layout, the Old Course at St. Andrews, the birthplace and cradle of the game.

Particularly to be reckoned with is the 17th, perhaps the most difficult hole in golf. It's 461 yards long, heavy rough on the left, out of bounds on the right. A corner of the old course hotel intrudes into the fairway. A road runs along the right and bites into the green. There are bunkers and swales and hollows.

It's possible, as Scot Brian Barnes did, to putt off the green into a bunker. Bogeys, double bogeys and other assorted horrors outnumber pars more than 2-1.

"I don't like the hole," Palmer said bluntly.

"It cost me the British Open in 1960. I played it 5-5-5-4." He lost that title by a single stroke. But he returned and won the next two years, a string that helped revive the British Open as one of the world's four major tests of golfing greatness.

Nicklaus, who won his second British Open title in 1970, the last time this event was played at St. Andrews, let some golden opportunities escape him in his bid for a 15th major professional title.

He shot par 72 for 143 despite two-putting every green.

THEY LET GEORGE DO IT

Yanks Have No Choice

NEW YORK (AP) — If there was ever any doubt about who calls the shots for the New York Yankees—and there really wasn't—it is all out in the open now.

The man is owner Gerrge M. Steinbrenner.

"He owns the team," slugger Reggie Jackson said Thursday following the Yankees' latest brouhaha—as well as the latest defeat, a 6-1 loss to the Chicago White Sox. "When George comes down and says what he's gonna do — if he tells me to go home, I go home. In my home I'm the boss, and if you don't like it—quit."

That essentially was what Steinbrenner told his stumbling, injury-riddled troops in a pre-game clubhouse meeting in which he lashed out at what he called a lack of discipline and too much griping. He said from now on club rules would be enforced "with no exceptions."

Earlier, Steinbrenner met with manager Billy Martin, club president Al Rosen and general manager Cedric Tallis and announced a series of lineup changes with Jackson becoming a part-time designated hitter— at least temporarily—sore-legged catcher Thurman Munson moving to the outfield and outfielder Gary Thomasson getting a shot as an everyday player. Rookie Mike Heath will be the No. 1 catcher.

There also was a report that Steinbrenner offered to allow Martin to resign—staying with the club on a long-term, consulting basis— if his health had become too much of a problem. Martin, who has suffered from a lingering virus infection and almost fainted before a game in Minnesota, declined, and that was that, The Daily News reported.

"I'm not a quitter," Martin told The News. "I want to try to win this thing."

The upshot of the changes is that Lou Piniella, the team's leading hitter, and Roy White will ride the bench for a spell while Jackson DH's against right-handers and selected lefties.

Jackson drove in the only run in Thursday's loss with a ninth-inning homer.

What really irks Steinbrenner is the Yankees' third-place standing, 11½ games from the top before Thursday's loss.

Meanwhile, it was another typical day in Boston's Fenway Park — eight home runs and a lot of stitch-popping hits.

But guess what? It wasn't the Red Sox doing most of the damage this time.

Texas Rangers looked as irrepressible as the hard-hitting Red Sox usually do in their colorful ballpark and beat a steady tattoo off Boston pitching in the American League baeball encounter.

Before it was over, the Rangers pounded five homers and three doubles amont their 17 hits and had a 12-7 victory over the team fearfully nickneamed the "boston Manglers."

In other American League action, Baltimore Orioles beat Minnesota Twins 8-5, Oakland A's stopped Cleveland Indians 7-3, Molwaukee Brewers routed Kansas City Royals 13-2, California Angels blanked Toronto Blue Jays 5-0 and Seattle Mariners edged Detroit Tigers 5-4.

Cellar-Dwellers Top Macs Again

COQUITLAM — Coquitlam J-Hawks, solidly mired in the cellar of the Western Canada Junior Lacrosse League, played the part of spoilers again Thursday night, clipping Victoria McDonalds, 11-9.

It was the second straight time Bakers, who are struggling to maintain a hold on third place, have fallen to the J-Hawks.

Mike Reelie and Geordie Dean, one of the most potent combination punches in the league, sparked the Coquitlam attack with three goals each.

Dave Redline, Randy Reckoff, Al Manning, Ken Galloway and Dan Gamble notched single goals for J-Hawks.

Jeff Whitney-Griffiths set the scoring pace for Victoria with three goals, Wayne Reeve had two and singles were contributed by Tarey Pollock, Doug Angrove, Ed Van Dyk and Ken Murray.

Bill Thomas, who went all the way in the Victoria net, blocked 47 shots in a duel with Brian Kelly of Coquitlam, who made 42 saves.

Heavy Traffic Assured For IDC Series

By JIM CREAR
Times Staff

If you're looking for racing duels, this year's International Drivers' Challenge series for superstocks could be right up your alley.

The ninth annual series, billed as the richest in the Pacific Northwest with more than $50,000 in posted awards, makes stops at Victoria's Western Speedway next Tuesday and Thursday.

The series opens tonight at Spokane, continues Sunday afternoon at Evergreen Speedway in Monroe, Wash., and concludes next weekend with races Friday at Langley Speedway, Saturday at Skagit Speedway near Mount Vernon, Wash., and Sunday at Evergreen.

Best bets for bumper-to-bumper battles are Tacoma's Ron Eaton and Don Dowdy of Yakima, Wash., but those looking for a duel of home-breds should keep an eye on Victorians Roy Haslam and Roy Smith.

Eaton is the current Northwest NASCAR points leader while Dowdy is the defending NASCAR champ. The two have staged a couple of down-to-the-wire thrillers this season. Last weekend, Dowdy roared into Tacoma's Spanaway Speedway and upset Eaton on his home track. Eaton, however, got even next day by edging Dowdy at Evergreen.

Haslam, meanwhile, has been piloting a new 1978 Camaro with great success, logging a couple of main-event wins in the early going. Smith has been running second to Haslam in his '74 Nova but plans to move into his new '78 Camaro in time for the IDC series. The car has just been completed by Aircraft Standards in Seattle.

Haslam, Smith, Eaton and Dowdy face some fast and heavy traffic as officials expect one of the largest fields in years. There were 24 entries by Wednesday and you can usually count on several more by race night.

Included is a strong contingent of California drivers and the one with the most impressive credentials is Hoppy Hopkinson, who's driving a '77 Camaro. Hopkinson holds 10 track records in his home state and was the individual champ in 1975 and '76 when the U.S. and New Zealand met in a stock car challenge series.

Utah's top entry is veteran Bob Leftwich from Provost who, like Smith, is at home behind the wheel of both superstocks and the open-wheelers. Leftwich was a consistant stock car winner between 1968 and 1972 before switching to modifieds, in which he won the Utah state title.

Wheeling in from Oregon is Eugene's David Points in a '72 Nova while Alberta will be represented by March Mormyluk of St. Albert ('75 Pontiac) and Saskatchewan will send Regina's Barry Powers ('74 Nova), a frequent visitor at Western Speedway.

Last year's IDC boiled down to a one-car series when Larry Phillips blew past everyone else for the title and $10,550 of the prize pot. Phillips, however, is recovering from burns suffered in a racing accident in May.

Programs Tuesday and Thursday at Western begin with time trials at 7 p.m. followed by two trophy dashes, a 50-lap "B" main and 75-lap "A" main.

On Saturday, a regular program of stock and superstock racing will begin with time trials at 7 p.m.

Several Island Spots Yield Chinooks, Coho

Some nice-sized chinooks and coho are providing brisk fishing action in a number of Vancouver Island areas.

Secretary Island waters off Sooke are yielding chinooks to 32 pounds along with the odd coho and sockeye. Both of the latter species are topping off at six pounds.

Most of the catches have been made on anchovies or minnows trolled at the 70-foot depth but the great numbers of bait fish that showed up in the vicinity Wednesday could depress returns for a time.

Chinooks to 44 pounds are being caught in waters between Bedford Island and the Trap Shack by trollers using strip, minnows and anchovies fished with 40 to 80 feet of line and up to 1½ pounds of lead during the day or with as little as eight ounces early in the morning.

Denis Scherk of Magna Charters reports groups they've taken out have landed 35 to 40 chinooks so far this week by drift-fishing with Pirkens off the Pedder Bay kelp bed. Coho to seven pounds are also turning up in the catch.

The same lure is also catching a few chinooks to 15 pounds off Halibut Flats at Oak Bay.

Returns have picked up at Sidney in the past few days. Len Bland topped fishermen working the area by landing at 21:08-pounder Tuesday while trolling a green and blue Squirt on 30 inches of leader behind an Abe and Al just off the bottom near Saanichton Spit.

Coal Island is producing slightly smaller chinooks.

Early morning is the best time to be fishing off Wain Rock, where chinooks to nine pounds and a solitary five-pound coho have turned up in recent days. Strip, hootchies, Tom Macks and Krippled-Ks have all worked equally well in terms of numbers of fish landed but strip appears to catch the largest salmon.

Vic Holman boated a 20-pounder off Bamberton on Wednesday night to top the effort in that area and John Davies landed a six-pound coho the same evening while trolling a Krippled-K off Coles Bay.

Chinooks to 23 pounds form the main return in Finlayson Arm with a few five-pound coho thrown in for variety. Most of the catches have been on deep lines with strip.

Moochers working off Separation Point are picking up chinooks to 20 pounds and fishermen hitting the evening tide at Bold Bluff have gone home successful.

Coffin Point near Laysmith is also a good bet.

Returns off the north end of Big Finger Island have dropped off slightly but a few chinooks to 20 pounds and coho to four are grabbing yellow Flashtails trolled on deep lines right at the crack of dawn.

Better catches have turned up off Texada Island, Northwest Bay and Winchelsea Island fishing with a downrigger and either strip or plug-cut herring.

Action is starting to get hot for fishermen working off Bamfield either trolling with strip on deep lines or drift-fishing with Stingsildas. Chinooks to 30 pounds form the main catch.

Some coho are reported to be tipping the scales to nine pounds in the vicinity of Bates Beach, Hornby Island and Oyster River. Hootchies and small plugs have produced best early in the morning.

A few chinooks to 40 pounds are showing in scattered locations near Campbell River and numerous coho to six pounds have been landed off Cape Mudge, Baker Pass, the Red and Gray Buoys, Butler Point and Salmon Point as well as Hernando, Savary and Mitlenatch islands.

Cedar Hill Leads Seniors

Cedar Hill golfers, enjoying home-course advantage, took the first-round lead in the team event of the Vancouver Island Seniors Golf Association championship tournament Thursday.

The Saanich club leads the two-day event, which was scheduled to conclude today at Royal Colwood, with 254.

Nanaimo trails closely at 256 and is followed by Uplands (263), Royal Colwood (266), Glen Meadows (266), Victoria (267), Ardmore (275) and Gorge Vale (283).

Gordon Verley of Victoria and Eric Wright of Royal Colwood each fired a two-over-par 69 to share the lead in the battle for low gross laurels while Ken King of Uplands, Al Spaight of Glen Meadows and Don Lloyd of Colwood are tied for low net at 57.

Webster Event Bowl Champs

Marg Atherton, Leona Peterson and Nancy Baker captured the "A" title in the Anne Webster Trophy women's triples lawn bowling competition by edging Jean Fullard, Connie Fraser and Pat Morrison 15-13 in the final at Lakehill.

Kay Drozdowski, Helen Holmberg and Mildred Konchak collected the "B" title with a 17-10 decision over Vilsie Wright, Madie Carver and Rose Evans.

Esquimalt Ruth Champs; Carnarvon Takes Opener

Esquimalt tripped Cosmopolitan 7-2 Thursday night at Lambrick Park to capture the 15-year-old Babe Ruth all-stars baseball championship at Lambrick Park.

Meanwhile, play began in the Carnarvon 13-year-old Pony League tournament at Carnarvon Park and all three Little League Area tournaments are getting down to the wire.

Mike Bull won a tight, pitching duel with Mike Southey to give Esquimalt the Ruth title and a berth in the British Columbia finals.

Carnarvon edged West Vancouver 4-2 and Burien of Washington State mauled Capilano of Vancouver 14-1 in the Pony openers.

Warren Mar pitched a one-hitter to spark the Carnarvon victory while Grant Fenton and David Backhouse hit back-to-back singles to knock in two runs each.

Alan Carr and John McCarthy of Burien combined to hold Capilano to two hits.

The tourney continues through Sunday.

In Little League play, Esquimalt ousted National 3-2 in the Area One tourney at Layritz Park, Sidney eked out a 1-0 win over Beacon Hill in the Area Two tourney at Hollywood Park and American bounced Gordon Head 8-2 in the Area Three tussle at Hampton Park.

Steve Parkes set the pace for Esquimalt with two hits.

Sidney's triumph was guided by Robert McInnes, who scored the lone run, and Richard Myerscough, who pitched the four-hit shutout.

Play in all three tournaments continues with games at 6:30 tonight.

Round-Saltspring Race Due

AROUND OUR SHORES

One of the most popular events of the summer racing season takes place next weekend when the Saltspring Island Club holds its annual 50-mile race around the island for the Marshall Sharp Trophy.

Members of the host club must register by today but visiting competitors can register between 10:30 a.m. and 9 p.m. at the clubhouse next Friday. Registration is $10 for guest boats.

Providing you belong to a recognized sailing club, you can enter any craft, even down to a Sabot but dinghy sailors must provide their own escorting power boat for safety reasons.

Naturally, ministry of transport regulations must be met.

The race begins in Ganges Harbor at 8 a.m. on the Saturday.

The islanders can always be depended upon to be good hosts and the party scheduled to begin at 3 p.m, on Sunday should be a fitting climax to a fun weekend. The spread the members always put on, including a hearty barbecue, is always a delight to appetites heightened by the sea air.

An added bonus this year will be the spanking new concrete moorings that have been built by volunteer labor. They're great.

If you're interested and want some more information give rear-commodore Dick Moore a ring at 537-2679 or phone Phyllis Sinclair at 537-9327. You can also write the club. The address is Box 1035, Ganges, B.C. VOS 1EO.

The annual cruise of the Esquimalt Squadron, Canadian Forces Sailing Association, winds up this evening at that old favorite, Fisherman's Bay. The cruise began last Saturday, the first stop being Genoa Bay.

Touching on cruising reminds me of a handy little gadget for those of us who like to take our pooches along when we're under sail or power. You can get it at the Aquatiel Pet Shop store in Sidney.

It's called the Skipper pet safety harness and is ideal if you have a Bowser that's not too sure-footed on deck or wants to swim over the side at inconveniant moments.

The Skipper, which has been approved by a local veterinarian, is made of nylon webbing and has a white pick-up strap. The company recommends a safety line be attached from the pick-up handle to a fitting or lifeline when the boat is under way. If you don't wsnt to bother with a line a boathook slipped through the pick-up handle will do the trick.

While the CFSA keel boats are making their way home to Esquimalt this weekend the squadron's dinghy sailors will have series racing again on Sunday. Start time is 1 p.m.

The Royal Victoria Yacht Club will hold its annual picnic on Chatham Island this Sunday and, as in past years, a salmon barbecue will be a highlight. Also on the menu will be corn on the cob, hot dogs and coleslaw.

On Saturday there will be another race in the around-Discovery Island series, beginning at 1 p.m. It will be a reverse handicap event with, hopefully, most of the boats finishing close together.

The B.C. Sailing Association's championships for 16-years-and-under was raced at RVYC last weekend, Kim Hellwig and Hart Buck of the host club earning their spurs as the new champions. Another crew from RVYC — Paul Callan and David Bertoia placed sixth. Runners-up were Brent Woyat and Mike Brynesteyn of the West Vancouver Yacht Club. Finishing in third place were Robbie Cannon and Ross McFadyen of Salt Spring.

RVYC will have series racing again on Wednesday, beginning at 6:30 p.m. Fleet captain Barry Wright reports that some skippers want to race with their families and make things easier for their wives and children by cutting out spinnakers and other flying sails. Barry says Jack Woodward has volunteered to work out ratings for the Family Sail category.

Canadians Continue To Do Well at Bisley

BISLEY, England (CP) — The Canadian Armed Forces team has scooped two more trophies by the end of three days shooting at the annual Bisley rifle meet.

A Canadian forces team of four—Sgt. Graham Smith and Cpl. Nick Lauriston, both from Calgary; Cpl. Dave Haines of Winnipeg, and Cpl. Ralph Comeau of Gagetown, N.B.—won the Hamilton Leigh Challenge Cup after beating the Scottish division and the crack Ghurka rifles in a tie-breaking reshoot.

The Canadians scored 34½ against 32½ and 32, respectively. The match, known among the troops as The Hamilton Gallop, involved clearing an obstacle course, climbing a wall, then shooting down a series snapshooting targets. There were 43 entrants.

Meanwhile, Pte. George Taylor, 19, from Sebringville, Ont., a member of the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, continued to make a name for himself at Bisley by collecting the Rapids Aggregate Challenge Cup, his second major win.

The trophy is awarded for the best aggregate in three rapid fire events and Taylor won with 142 out of a possible 150, beating some of the British army's top shots. There were 341 entrants.

The young Canadian soldier also went on to win a silver medal in the Green Jackets Challenge Cup, a concurrent event to the combat shooting matches, confined to "green jackets" members of rifle regiments.

Former British army champion, Warrant Officer Victor Brooks, scored 241 to win the cup, to Taylor's 231.

To end his day, the "baby" of the Canadian forces team came out top Canadian and 16th, among 425 participants, in the service rifle events tally to find the over-all service rifle champion.

The title will depend on a tie-shoot on Friday between two Britons who made the highest score, 422 out of a possible 470. Taylor's total was 398.

Hobbs Gains Men's Final

Art Hobbs continued to play the role of a giant-killer Thursday night, advancing to the final of the men's singles competition by upsetting seventh-seeded Scott Braley 6-4, 6-5 during Victoria city tennis championship action.

Hobbs, who is unseeded, has managed to post a string of upsets while gaining the final but will be facing top-ranked Russ Hartley in the final Saturday.

Hartley, who is seeking to break a family jinx, won the other semi-final 2-6, 6-4, 6-0 over third-seeded Trevor Smyth.

Hartley has been in the final for the past two straight years and lost each time to Ian Brady. His father, Gordon, managed to reach the final four times but never collected the title.

In women's singles play, second-seeded Sandra Moss earned the right to face Val Brice in the final by tripping third-ranked Jean Shaw, 4-6, 6-1, 6-3.

The men's final kicks things off Saturday at 10:30 a.m. at the Oak Bay Tennis Club.

Hebb Sharp in Hoop Meet

WINNIPEG (CP) — France picked up its first win Thursday in a junior women's basketball tournament, edging Alberta 56-52.

The French team, previously beaten by Manitoba and Canada, trailed Alberta 33-30 at the half but finished strong.

In other games, Canada defeated Saskatchewan 86-39, then Manitoba downed Saskatchewan 75-33.

Luanne Hebb had 22 points for the Canadian team, who held a commanding 46-11 lead at the half.

Canada closed out Thursday's action with another lopsided victory, downing Alberta 87-36.

Hebb had 13 points.

The win gave Canada a 3-0 record, the same as Manitoba. France has one win and two losses, Saskatchewan is 0-2 and Alberta is winless in three starts.

Archery Tournament Draws Top City Stars

Three seasoned women competitors from Victoria — Vi Muir, Wanda Allen and Gerri Cosgrove — will take part in the Pacific Northwest archery championships Saturday and Sunday at Juan de Fuca Recreation Centre.

Allen and Muir are members of the 1976 Canadian Olympic team and all three are veterans of international competiton.

Provincial-champions Don Warren and Dave Mann of Vancouver will represent British Columbia in the men's events.

The competiton, which gets underway at 9 a.m. Saturday and continues through Sunday, features entries from Alberta, Alaska, Washinton, Oregon, Idaho and Montana.

Lead Shared In CPGA Event

HORNBY, Ont. (CP) — Bob Breen and Ken Fulton shared the lead after 18 holes of the revived Canadian Professional Golfers' Association Club Professional championship Thursday.

Breen, the host pro at Glen Abbey in Oakville, Ont., and Fulton of Toronto fired opening-round 66s for a one-shot lead on Ken Girard of London, Ont., in the 54-hole tourney at Wyldewood Golf and Country Club.

Oland Wins Trial

WINNIPEG (CP) — Erick Oland of Winnipeg won the 1,000-metre time trial at the Canadian junior men's road and cycling championship Thursday.

Oland, who had a winning time of 1:15.1, was followed by two Quebecers.

NASTASE FINED $15,000

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Playing-coach Ilie Nastase has been fined $15,000 by Los Angeles Strings of World Team Tennis for missing a match against New Orleans Nets, Wednesday.

Nastase played Wednesday in a $300,000 invitational tournament in New York City. He is in the second year of a three-year contract with the Strings, and the contract includes a penalty clause for missing matches.

Morley, Marti Share Lead

COAL-VALLEY, Ill. (AP) — Mike Morley and Fred Marti shared the lead at five-under-par 66 Thursday after the first round of the $150,000 Quad Cities Open golf tournament.

Morley, the defending champion, has been on the skid since early this season. The 66 was his best start of the year despite being forced to use a spare driver since his regular club shattered earlier this week.

"I guess I should have broken the other driver years ago," he said. "This one is about six ounces heavier and I think I hit the ball a little farther with it."

Marti, who has not won a tournament in 14 years on the pro tour, has played well all week, carding a 66 in qualifying Monday and a 67 on a nearby course Tuesday.

Roger Maltbie, winner here when he was Golf Digest's rookie of the year in 1975, was among seven players one stroke back at 67.

Dave Barr of Kelowna, B.C., had a 69 in the first round while Jim Nelford of Burnaby, B.C., shot a 71.

Cowan on Top

TORONTO (CP) — Gary Cowan of Kitchener Westmount, playing over a course that has always been good to him, took a four-stroke lead Thursday after three rounds of the Ontario amateur golf championship.

Cowan fired a two-under par 70 on the Weston Golf and Country Club course, where he first won the open back in 1964. His 70 went with a 71 Wednesday and a 72 Tuesday to give him a three round total of 213.

His closest rival is Bruce Berdock of the Toronto Board of Grade club, who also shot a 70 for a total of 217.

Favorites Out of B.C. Golf

COQUITLAM (CP) — Lynn Cooke of Coquitlam and Valerie White of Vancouver scored stunning upsets Thursday to advance to the final of the British Columbia women's amateur golf championship.

White eliminated medalist Gail Moore of Coquitlam 2 and 1 in one semi-final match, while Cooke downed eight-time winner Marilyn Palmer of Vancouver 4 and 3 in the other semi.

Cooke and White meet today in the 36-hole final over the par-74, 6,150-yard Vancouver Golf and Country Club course.

White, 23, was a finalist three years ago in Trail, losing to Dorothy DeGiralamo of Victoria. White eliminated Billie Bartley of Richmond 3 and 2 earlier Thursday in the quarter-finals.

Cooke, 22, won her quarter-final match in the morning 5 and 4 over Lisa Young of Prince Rupert, the 1977 B.C. junior champion.

In the other matches Thursday, Palmer beat Jane Cousins of Coquitlam 3 and 2, while Moore sidelined Susan McCleery of Kamloops 5 and 4.

The two rounds were played under sunny skies and warm temperatures after the medal rounds Monday and Tuesday were played in damp conditions.

Sherk Winner

TORONTO (CP) — Cathie Sherk of Port Colborne, Ont., birdied five holes of the final round, then coasted to her first Ontario women's amateur title at the York Downs club Thursday with a 70 and 216 total for the 54 holes.

Fonthill club-mate Marlene Stewart Streit of Toronto, an 11-time winner of the event, closed with a one-over-par 74 and finished second with a total of 228.

$60,000 Garbage Savings Foreseen in Saanich Plan

Saanich municipal engineer Clifford Warren says he is optimistic the municipality will be able to save perhaps as much as $50,000 to $60,000 a year from possible changes in garbage collection and disposal methods he hopes to recommend soon in a report to council.

Warren's study of the problem is still under way and he doesn't expect to submit his report for at least a month, but he says one key change being considered is the replacement of the standard garbage pickup trucks with much smaller one-man vehicles.

"The man would go along by himself just as a milkman does," he said.

Personnel would be assigned specific routes on a permanent basis.

Warren said experience in other cities, including Calgary and Edmonton, indicates such a system is more efficient than the more common crew complement, where social distractions are present.

"There is something to be said for one man working by himself rather than in a group of people," he added.

Warren said he is also investigating possible economies through disposal of Saanich garbage at the city of Victoria's wharf, instead of trucking it to the Hartland Road dump.

By such means he believes he can significantly reduce the municipality's garbage budget of about $900,000.

But no change is contemplated in the present frequency of backyard pickup — weekly in the summer months and every two weeks the rest of the year.

"We haven't had that many complaints about the lack of weekly collection in the non-summer months," Warren explained.

JANITORS GRADUATING

A graduation ceremony will be held at the Garth Home Achievment Centre next Friday for 13 people who passed a six-month custodial course.

Executive director George Bates said nine have already been found building maintenance jobs.

The janitorial course, the first of its kind, was open to the physically disabled or mentally retarded.

"It was a success," said Bates. "Patients were enthusiatic and worked hard."

Good Turnout Expected For Epilepsy Meet

More than 350 papers will be presented at an Epilepsy International Symposium Sept.10-14 in Vancouver.

Dr. John Wada, of the University of British Columbia, chairman of the symposium, said about 1,000 delegates are expected to attend.

REFERENDUM DEMANDED ON MOBILE HOME PARK

Sidney residents opposing a proposed 240-unit mobile home park called Thursday night for a referendum to decide once and for all how the town feels about the project.

About 300 people attended the second public hearing held on the issue at Sanscha Hall.

Opponents of the project at the Patricia Bay Highway and Canora Road say it will increase population and traffic in the area and put a burden on the sewage treatment plant.

The proposal by Leisure Villa Estates Ltd. of Vancouver would also include a recreation centre and a six-acre park.

Search Waste Costs $18,000

A thoughtless boater and a hoax by a Prince Rupertman cost Canadian taxpayers at least $18,000 in useless searches Thursday.

A search and rescue spokesman said the first incident involved Danny Slager, 26, of Cloverdale, who was travelling by boat with his 58-year-old mother and a friend, C. Alexander, 33, also of Cloverdale, from Crescent Beach to Ladysmith.

The Slager search involved two hovercraft, the 40-foot cutter Mallard, the 95-foot cutter Rider, four boats manned by Provincial Emergency Program volunteers and two coast guard inflatable rescue craft.

A PRCC spokesmam said today the hunt lasted more than 30 hours and cost at least $500 an hour.

Slager was supposed to pick up his brother in Ladysmith at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday and when his boat failed to arrive, the Pacific Rescue Co-ordination Centre at CFB Esquimalt was alerted.

The search ended when a Canadian Coast Guard inflatable craft found the boat out of gas about half a mile south of Point Roberts Thursday night.

A rescue spokesman said the trio apparently spent the night at Sidney Wednesday and went fishing Thursday without letting Sager's brother know their plans.

Another unnecessary search took place Thursday after a man described later as mentally ill called the centre, saying he was phoning from the ferry terminal at Prince Rupert.

He said a 42-foot fishing boat had exploded and was in danger of sinking. He said there were six people aboard.

The 150-foot buoy tender Alexander Mackenzie, the 40-foot pilot boat out of Prince Rupert and two PEP boats searched the area for four hours.

Rescue officials eventually learned the call was a hoax by the man, who had done the same thing before. He was taken for a psychiatric examination.

Crash Victim Found

Search officials Thursday recovered the body of a pilot from the wreckage of his light aircraft near the Stikine River, approximately 10 miles west of Hyland Post. The body of Glen Holmes of Prince George, was taken out by members of the Dease Lake RCMP detachment. The plane had crashed in bad weather on Thursday morning.

Designer Does It All

By BERNADINE MORRIS

Dancer. Choreographer. Painter. Director. Geoffrey Holder has been them all. Now he has his eyes on still another discipline: dress designer.

"It's a tradition in my family," he explained. "My mother was a seamstress back in Trinidad, and my father used to tell her what to make for herself. She always wanted to look like Norma Shearer. And my brother, Boscoe — he's the brother from whom I learned everything I know — used to design clothes for his wife. So I decided to make clothes for mine."

Designing is not exactly an untested field for him. He has designed costumes for the stage for a long time. He won a Tony Award for the ones he did for "The Wiz." And he has always designed clothes for his wife, Carmen de Lavallade, the dancer.

Carol Channing liked the dress Miss de Lavallade wore to the opening of "Dancin" and decided she wanted to wear something like it when she served as a hostess at this year's Coty Awards.

"I described it to Halston — it was in white cotton with enormous sleeves and flounces — and he said nobody could do it but Geoffrey Holder," she recalled in her Waldorf Towers apartment where she and the designer were having a conference on her fall wardrobe.

Holder made the dress with a few structural changes and added yards of white beads from which Miss Channing's face emerged "like a flower," he said. He designed it in two pieces, with the top separate from the skirt "so it carries its own built-in air-conditioning," he explained. Inside, there is a voluminous petticoat with turquoise ribbon threaded above the hemline flounce. Turquoise is his favorite color — he wore several large turquoise rings with his white linen suit for his meeting with Miss Channing.

"Carmen wears the skirt of her dress with a camisole sometimes instead of the blouse," he volunteered. "That's the way clothes should be — three or four pieces that you can switch around."

He also believes "if you're big, you should look as if you enjoy it." Holder is 6 feet 6 inches himself. "If you're small, you should dress as if you enjoyed that too," he added.

The clothes he is planning to make for the public will all be "for after five o'clock because I believe in fantasy." They will also be constructed so the body can move freely within them.

"Once you find a way of dressing that looks good on you, you should stay with it," he advised. "I don't believe in women changing their style all the time."

Bill Blass has been doing blazers for years, but none for tennis. His first all-white tennis blazer will be in the stores in September along with his new tennis clothes for men and women.

His men's clothes are in the classic category — snug shorts and T-shirts for playing plus warm-up styles such as bloused pullovers and pants that can double as jogging outfits.

The styles for women offer a choice between mildly frilly and sharply tailored things. Blass has long been known for adding a softening ruffle or two to his regular daytime and evening clothes. He's done the same in his tennis fashions.

The tailored styles have a banding or two of dark green or navy blue to emphasize the pecision look. A button-down-the-front dress with a navy band down the centre is a particularly good idea. So is a white leotard with green banding which is wrapped in a similarly banded skirt.

Blass shows the blazer over a long torso dress with a brief pleated skirt, but he also recommends it over the separate pieces or the long pants.

Carol Channing, Geoffrey Holder check out one of his latest designs of a dress for Miss Channing

The one-piece swimsuits had a slight edge over the bikinis in the collection shown by Christian Dior for its American licensees. Since they were all in stretch fabrics and fit like second skin, none provided any leeway for wayward bumps or bulges. Oh, there was an attempt at camouflage with shirring or ruffles inserted at the bosom or around the top on bikini pants, but don't count on them to provide any useful disguise for figure imperfections.

The styles will be produced by Roxanne in time for the next resort season and by other manufacturers in Mexico, Argentina, Venezuela and Brazil. You remember Brazil. That's where the "string," the absolutely minimal bikini, surfaced a few years ago.

Colors recommended by Dior include cyclamen pink, a rather brilliant blue and a muted olive tone that looks new for the beach. But the really interesting designs combined two colors — the pink with the blue, for example, or the olive with brown — to show how much diversity you can get within the limited scope of a minimal swimsuit. Sometimes the second color was introduced as a band slashing diagonally across the centre of a one-piece style or outlining the top and bottom of a bikini. Some styles were divided into two parts, harlequin fashion, and some had a wide midriff of the contrasting tone.

Almost every suit was equipped with some sort of cover-up, ranging from a narrow scarf that was tied around the hips and didn't really cover up very much of anything to a beach dress that descended to the ground.

A rather useful idea was the sheer shirt in the swirl print that accompanied a matching swimsuit. The swimsuit was opaque. But the best idea of all was a hooded parka over a matching bra and boxer shorts and there were bikini pants underneath. Practically a weekend wardrobe all by itself.

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: Many years ago I falsified my age on my driver's license. (I deducted three years from my birth date.) I am now 62, and I look every year of it.

I am actually entitled to some senior citizen benefits, but my driver's license says I'm only 59.

In order to change the birth date on my driver's license, I have to write to the State Department of Motor Vehicles. I haven't written to them because I'm terrified of the consequences. I've never been in any kind of trouble in my entire lifetime, and I have an unblemished driving record.

Will I lose my licence? I can't have that happen. Will I be arrested? Will I have to pay a stiff fine? What will my punishment be?

Please find out what's in store for me. If the penalty is too great, I'll leave well enough alone and forget the benefits. I don't want to go to jail, but I think they may have to lock me up in a mental institution if I have to worry much longer over this mess I got myself into years ago. Has anyone else ever had this problem?

WORRIED

DEAR WORRIED: Many others have had this problem, and if that's the worst crime anyone ever committed, we'd all be saints.

Simply provide proof of your real age to the Department of Motor Vehicles (a copy of our birth certificate is considered acceptable documentation), and all will be forgiven and forgotten.

DEAR ABBY: You frequenltly say: "You'll feel better if you get it off your chest," so I am writing to get something off my chest.

I get along okay with my mother-in-law, although deep down I've always had the feeling that she never really liked me.

What bugs me most about her is this: When she calls our house and I answer the phone, she says, "Let me talk to Dennis."

She never asks me how I am or anything.

I don't have the nerve to tell her to her face how much this irritates me, but if I were to pick up the paper one day and see this letter in your column, it would really make my day.

SOMEBODY WHO FEELS LIKE NOBODY

DEAR SOMEBODY: I'm glad I was able to make your day.

DEAR ABBY: For the man who promised his wife on her deathbed that he would never marry again and then broke his promise and felt guilty, I urge him to heed these wise and lovely words from the Talmud:

"Man shall be called to account for all the permitted pleasures he failed to enjoy."

Sign me — IN LOVE AT 60.

DEAR IN LOVE: I knew about the "sins of omission," but that a person shall be called to account for all the permitted pleasures he failed to enjoy is joyous news indeed!

PIC Seeks to Prevent Child Abuse

elizabeth forbes

All parents feel pretty angry at their children at times.

Some parents feel angrier than others — some more often.

Some children are harder to cope with; some children make their parents angry too often.

That's where real trouble can begin and the dread words "child abuse" comes into the picture.

Those parents who feel angrier than some others need help. Lots of help!

A few months ago, new allies joined the fight against child abuse in all its forms, in the Victoria area.

Called Parents in Crisis (PIC), and sponsored by its capital region branch in New Westminster, this group is composed entirely of volunteers — "all parents who understand."

First names only are used by these volunteers in every phase of the work.

Main object is to reach parents who are afraid they will go too far one day and, in some way, abuse their children. And, having made contact, to get them together and relieve the pressures by "talking it out."

In the short time since it was organized, PIC has chalked up considerable success.

Its volunteers are currently in touch with some 60 parents, between the ages of 18 and 45.

Meetings are held once a week. The parents run those meetings and all discussions are confidential.

Mary, a very active PIC member — and an organizer of the local group — usually acts as moderator.

"That doesn't mean we counsel those who attend," she says. "Ours is a low-key approach in which we try to guide them into ways we feel they need."

Here, the idea as she explains it "is to try and maintain an atmosphere where a mother or a father — after attending one or two meetings — feels safe to talk over their problems.

"We let them talk. We listen."

Not all 60 parents attend meetings at one time. "But we are in touch with everyone by phone and we are ready to step in when crisis situations arise . . . even to visiting them in their homes to let them talk it out."

About 400 cases of child abuse reach the provincial superintendent of child welfare each year.

This, Mary says, is only the tip of the iceberg.

The greatest tragedy, she adds, is that the majority of battered children, are infants under three years.

Of these "most are under one year of age, and totally dependent for nurture and protection on the very people at whose hands they are suffering."

What constitutes a battered child?

Any child who is physically mistreated and on whom unjustifiable pain is inflicted, or who is subject to any cruel or inhuman punishment (mental or physical) or non-accidental injury.

Battering is at the top of the list, Mary says, "but there is also sexual abuse, emotional degradation, psychological abuse and neglect."

What kind of people abuse their children?

She says they come from all walks of life and rural communities as well as cities.

"That's why she hopes eventually to help set up branches of PIC in small communities."

They are often successful people who hold good jobs and keep neat and clean homes. Most love their children and have a desire to be good parents.

In many instances abusing parents are found to have been themselves abused as children.

Since they have experienced little sense of love and care as children, they are often cold and rigid with their own children.

They have a tendency to be highly mobile, Mary says, moving to different neighborhoods and "shopping" among doctors to avoid detection.

These abusing parents desperately need help and here's where PIC's work comes in.

"It has the answer to abuse, neglect, battering and depression," she points out.

"We are an anonymous, self-help group. We are all parents. We are growing and changing, we help one another."

Any parent or parents who know they have a problem "can be part of one of our groups," she adds.

"They do not have to face it alone."

If such a parent or parents happen to read this column and would like to join PIC, here are names and phone numbers to contact:

Pat, telephone 384-2834; Pam, telephone 474-1558; Mary, 656-4006.

Postscript—There's another side to the PIC story. In order to accomplish all it wants to do more volunteers are necessary. If you think you understand and would like to help, "we need you," Mary says.

Volunteers are badly needed to take on babysitting and for driving to and from meetings.

A Little Skytraining Could Avoid Hassle

Youth on the Move

By LUCY IZON

Summer's here, schools are closing and until now it's been anybody's guess how many travellers are going to try to take advantage of the low-cost Laker New York-London Skytrain.

But Laker, in anticipation of a large increase in passengers, added a Boeing 707 to its DC10 service May 10 and so there are now 500 seats available on two planes departing here at 8 p.m. and 11 p.m. daily.

This should relieve the situation but I came to New York to see just how easy it would be to get on one of these flights.

I arrived at the Laker Centre about 9 a.m. and waited in line about 20 minutes for my ticket. All seats were filled by 6 p.m. that day. Laker reports that recent flights have been 85 per cent full and they expect capacity crowds in July and August.

If you're planning on trying the Laker Skytrain yourself, here are some tips to save you some time and trouble.

Tickets, New York to London, are $135 (U.S.) eastbound and about $110 westbound. They can only be purchased on the day you are travelling. The tickets go on sale at 4 a.m. at the Laker Travel Centre, 9525 Queens Blvd., Queens, New York. (You'll find the entrance on Junction Blvd.)

If you plan to purchase tickets for yourself and friends, make sure you have their luggage and passports with you when you arrive at the centre. And remember food service is not included with the flight. Either bring your own, or place your order for breakfast, dinner, coffee, etc. before you leave the centre.

Getting into London from Gatwick Airport is easy. Inside the terminal itself is a train station and an express train leaves every 15 minutes for Victoria Station in downtown London. The cost is about $3 and you're there in 40 minutes.

London to New York Skytrain tickets are sold on the same one-way basis as the New York-London ones. To purchase them you must go either to the Laker Centre in Victoria Station (platform No. 2) between 4 a.m. and 4 p.m. or Gatwick Airport any time after 4 a.m.

In New York you can check on seat availability by phoning (212) 459-7323 before you head for the centre in Queens. When you call you'll get a recording which is updated every hour. While in London call 828-7766 to check on seats for New York.

Bio-dex

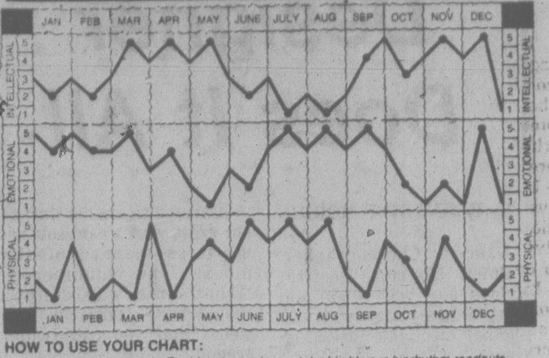
Your computerized biorhythm

©BIODEX PRODUCTIONS 1978

Dist by Toronto Sun Syndicate



HOW TO USE YOUR CHART:

Locate your month of birth. The dots on each graph highlight your biorhythm readouts. Check the scales on the left or right for your Intellectual, Emotional and Physical factors, from 1 to 5. Add these three numbers to obtain your Bio-dex. The Bio-dex is computed on average population age based on official Government statistics.

BIO-DEX READOUT:

0-5 Negative Cycle- Get out for fresh air when your lids get droopy and you feel sluggish. Don't tempt the doldrums.

6-10 Neutral Cycle- Some people thrive on controversy. This is a good time to keep out of their path.

11-15 Positive Cycle- Don't hide from difficulties. You've got what it takes to handle them.

Among all the elements of a high Bio-dex reading, I think the nicest is the lightheartedness that comes with a triple high. Even the most serious difficulties can't take the edge off your positive energy at such times. If there's a slight dip to your emotional line, you may feel apprehension, but your intellectual and physical will help see you through. Lightheartedness is a rather rare treat, so capitalize on it.

DEAR MR. COTTER: About four months ago I broke up with my boyfriend. I was deeply hurt and felt I no longer wanted to get so involved with a guy again. A month ago I met this guy and we hit it off right from the start.

We had only gone out for one week — every night — and I blew it. I started to fall in love with this guy and had to get away and think if this was what I wanted.

Last night he called me, after a month of not hearing from him; and said he wanted to talk things over. He still wants to go out with me but not get emotionally serious as he hurt a girl a year ago and couldn't do it again. I want to go out with him but how can I promise that I won't fall in love?

ANSWER: There is no way of guaranteeing that you won't fall in love with him. In fact, it is very likely. But "falling in love," as distinct from making a loving commitment with your will-power, is like an emotional allergy.

If you are terribly allergic to something, then you have to avoid that thing completely. If you are mildly allergic you can control your reactions between will-power and medication.

I think the fact that you rushed away was a sign that you have a mild love allergy that you want to control. If you are able to talk over the matter with him now, that is the best medication for a mild allergy of the love kind.

DEAR MR. VICHERT: My father and mother have been divorced for some time. Recently I have moved in with my mother. I like it here better but there is one problem: boys. Every time I meet a boy older than me she always tells my real age, 13.

One guy was interested in me and told my mother he was. He was 20. My mom told my real age to him. But he didn't care. He asked me to dance so I said okay and we danced a lot and I started to like him a lot. Now I think I'm in love with him.

ANSWER: I think that your mother is absolutely right to remind you, and others, that your age is 13. There will come a time when it will be appropriate for you to make your own decisions about who you date and how old they are, but at the age of 13 it is not appropriate and your mother is being caring of you to supervise your dates.

Naturally you could like someone a lot who is older than you, and also I am sure that you feel flattered by the attention. But I think that you are wise to want to find ways to handle your feelings so that they do not become too complicated.

One thing you could do is to go along with what your mother says and tell older men that you are 13 and that you are not interested. If you look older physically, it is important to let people know how old you are so that they do not make a mistake based upon your appearance.

You will find life simpler for yourself if you try to keep your friends, and your emotions, for people your own age.

DEAR DR. POWELL: I have a problem. I just turned 13 and I have had my period for about six months now. The last couple of times my period has come every two weeks, lasting nine days. Is this normal? I'm too scared to see a doctor so please answer this.

ANSWER: When a girl begins her periods she may not be regular for the first few months. Her cycle is not established and she will usually establish a regular cycle in time. However, it is annoying for her to have periods coming very frequently and lasting a long time. This makes you feel tired and irritable.

There is probably no serious reason and many girls do experience these irregular periods. If this continues you should check with your doctor. You may need to take iron to make up for the blood loss but your doctor is the one who can check your blood to find our whether you need an iron supplement.

There are doctors who specialize in seeing young people like you. They are particularly understanding of adolescents and the medical problems they have.

DEAR MR. VICHERT: I'm 14 and in Grade 9. I can't talk to my parents or my friends but I know you'll understand my problem.

I don't understand my boyfriend. Before he asked me to go steady he really showed me he loved me and just as much if not more. But I'm not sure he still loves me because he doesn't show it to me any more.

He's the kind of guy who just has to flirt, and I understand that but sometimes I really get jealous and confused because I love him so much and I'm not sure he loves me. Please don't tell me to drop him: I can't. What should I do?

ANSWER: If you don't want to "drop" your boyfriend then it may be necessary for you to accept his flirting behavior. I would advise you to talk with him and let him know that his flirting upsets you, but if after this conversation you both agree that he cannot stop flirting then you will have to accept that that is part of him.

Don't Fool with Non-Prescription Sleeping Pills

caveat emptor

Two major forms of sleeping pills are available to the consumer. One is the over-the-counter sleep aid; the other is the type of pill for which you need a doctor's prescription.

In a previous article I discussed the prescription pills, most of which are not effective for more than two weeks of consecutive use.

In the case of the over-the-counter products, the kind you can buy without prescription in drug stores, most of the experts I spoke to said these products should simply be avoided, and certainly never used without a doctor's consent — and then only according to instructions.

The reason is that the non-prescription sleep aids have been shown to be only mildly effective, if effective at all, in producing sleep. And when overused, they can be hazardous to your health.

In recent years researchers have been especially concerned about sleep-aids which contain an ingredient called bromide.

Studies have shown that when bromides are ingested at the levels needed to induce sleep, they are likely to give you rashes, impaired thought and memory, dizziness and irritability, as well as blood abnormalities. There is also strong evidence that a woman taking bromides as a sleep-aid during pregnancy runs the risk of producing mental retardation in her child.

Because of such dangers, the federal health department has decided to remove bromides from the over-the-counter market as of July 1 of this year. They will be available only by prescription after this date.

If you're having trouble sleeping, keep in mind that it's decidedly not a good idea to take ANY chemical, in any form, for an extended period as a treatment for insomnia.

Researchers agree that some people do have a real, chronic insomnia, which may be caused by a variety of medical disorders, or by tension, or by behavioral factors such as drinking too many caffeine-containing beverages. But in none of these cases have drugs been shown to be useful except for a temporary alleviation of symptoms. This is true despite the fact that sleeping pills and tranquilizers, considered together, are the most commonly prescribed medicines in the world.

The overuse of sleeping medications is especially a problem as we get older. At this stage of life we don't need as much sleep as we did when younger, but the risk of harmful side effects from drugs — whether prescription or on-prescription — markedly gets higher as we get older.

Much insomnia is caused by our everyday problems of living including the stresses and strains of modern life. Accordingly, some physicians and counsellors have begun to turn to forms of treatment which do not include the use of drugs, but which aim instead to deal directly with the effects of stress. Included in this category are instructions in relaxation exercises, yoga and meditation, as well as behavioral approaches

Among the behavioral techniques is the suggestion that if you can't sleep, it's best to get out of bed, go to another room, and read or do something physical. In several minutes or half an hour you may feel naturally tired. (Some people call this fighting insomnia with insomnia.) In this way you condition yourself to think that when you lie in bed you can sleep, instead of associating it with being restless.

Some researchers have developed a behavioral self-management approach in which patients keep records of their daily moods and activities, and what they are eating and drinking. They soon discover that some of their daytime activities are getting in the way of a restful sleep. They then learn to make appropriate changes in their life during the day to enable them to sleep at night.

The over-all philosophy of most of the experts I consulted was that it's best to seek a non-chemical remedy for insomnia, especially since it's normally a fairly minor, self-limiting condition. The body itself will very often correct the condition, provided you relax and don't interfere with its work.

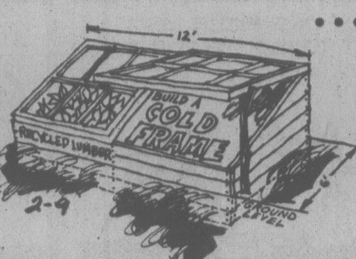
THE MOTHER EARTH NEWS®

. . . it tells you how



One of the easiest, least expensive ways to stretch your garden's growing season this year is by building a cold frame from recycled materials.

The unit doesn't have to be fancy (although it should be tightly constructed to reduce heat loss, its glass top should slant to the south, and the frame should be sheltered–against the wall of a house or outbuilding–on its north side). And don't expect to discover a "right" size for your homemade mini-greenhouse. Just look around the nearest dump or salvage yard until you find some glassed window sash that measure approximately 3 X 6 feet. Decide how many of the windows you want to use (keeping in mind that a cold frame larger than about six feet wide and twelve feet long makes for some difficult reaches), and construct a "box" on which to mount them.

A simple rectangle of rough planks (one and a half or two inches thick) will do the job just fine. Make the frame 24 inches tall at the back and about 16 inches high across the front. Set the structure approximately four inches into the ground, drive stakes solidly into the earth inside at all four corners, and spike the planks to the mini-posts for greater strength.

It's a good idea to spread a couple of inches of gravel inside the cold frame (to ensure good drainage) and you will, of course, want to hinge the old windows on top so they can be swung up and securely propped open whenever you want to reach inside the unit or–on hotter days–ventilate the interior of the box.

That's it! Your new gardening tool should warm up enough inside to allow you to start flats of plants four to six weeks earlier than normal in the spring. It will also furnish you with fresh salad greens far into the fall and winter . . . and the frame can serve as a storage area for root crops during exceptionally cold weather.

For more information about gardening under glass, send 10¢ and a stamped, self-addressed long envelope to THE MOTHER EARTH NEWS®, in care of this paper, Box 957, Des Moines, Iowa 50304. Ask for Reprint No. 6, COLD FRAMES, HOT BEDS AND GREENHOUSES.

Starving Of Tumors Explored

SEATTLE (AP) — Cancer researchers are trying to fight brain tumors by starving them into remission, says a Virginia scientist.

"We've had surgery, radiation and chemotherapy and really, the only new thing to try is diet therapy," says Dr. William Banks, co-director of the Medical College of Virginia cancer centre in Richmond.

"What we hope is occurring is that we are not starving the body but that we are selectively starving the tumor," he said in an interview during a conference on nutrition and cancer.

About two dozen victims of an almost-always fatal brain cancer called glioma have been participating in the Virginia project for almost two years. Dr. Banks said that's not long enough for solid conclusions, "but I would say we are cautiously encouraged."

The treatment involves identifying which of nine essential amino acids the tumor most requires. That can change from patient to patient, Dr. Banks said.

"Then the dietitian concocts a complex diet which contains all the essential amino acids except the one we've identified," he said.

The powder, which patients usually mix with flavored drinks, "has a very strange and unpleasant taste," Dr. Banks said.

Amino acids are used to build proteins, a major and necessary component of all cells. In cancer, affected cells grow out of control to produce tumors.

Immunology Good Bet For Deficiency Puzzles

your health

By L. L. COLEMAN, M.D.

Our five-year-old daughter has been having all kinds of infections. The doctors recently decided that she has an "immune deficiency." Can you explain this to us?—Mr. and Mrs. C.E.

Dear Mr. and Mrs. E.:

In the past 25 years, a great deal has been learned about immuno-deficiency diseases. This is a group of various disorders characterized by a greater susceptibility to infections. Many young children who have constant and repeated infections were found to have little or no immunity to the germs that affected them.

When once this is suspected, there are a number of highly sophisticated laboratory tests which can now determine positive evidence of a lack of immunity. Studies made on the blood can show a deficiency of globulin which normally is so important as a protective factor.

It is now possible to increase resistance to infections by giving a child regular doses of gamma globulin. The explosion of information in the science of immunology portends great hope for the control of many deficiency problems.

I live with my daughter and her husband. They have a young infant. I can't stand their new-fangled ways of letting the child cry before being fed. I know that when my children were small I fed them on a regular schedule. Wasn't this better?—Mrs. R.T.

Dear Grandma T.:

Now, you just leave those young folks alone. It's generally accepted today that "demand feeding" has many advantages over the method that you once used. Forcefully imposing food on infants who aren't hungry is not necessarily the best way to get them to enjoy food. You can be sure that your grandchild will flourish by being fed only when he sends out his own little signal. Living as you do with your children is evidence of their affection for you. Over the years, you're going to find that there are many departures from that which you once considered the ideal way to bring up a child. Soon, you will be questioning many other things that differ from your own ideas. You should prepare yourself and accept these "new-fangled" notions. If you don't, there is always the possibility that you will introduce conflicts in your relationship with your daughter and son-in-law.

Sketches Help

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sketches made by police artists after talking to witnesses have helped put hundreds of criminals behind bars. Donald Cherry, police artist in the District of Columbia, says a good witness, under questioning, "can let the mind wander a little to produce those fleeting memories of features, expressions and affections."

"Why must you always be a bad guy?"

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

After the opening lead had been made by the West defender in today's deal, our South declarer, upon seeing the dummy, chose a line of play that offered him a 75 per cent chance of fulfilling his contract. But it happened to be a bad night, and things didn't work our right.

I don't know whether South actually bemoaned his tough luck, but if he did, he had no right to, for he had a guaranteed game contract. The deal arose in a rubber-bridge game.

North-South vulnerable.
South deals.

♣ 6 5 2

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	3 ♡	Pass
4 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ◇.

After winning the opening lead with dummy's diamond king, declarer cased the ace and king of trumps. As declarer correctly appraised the situation, if West possessed either the ace or queen of clubs, then by making two club leads toward dummy declarer would lose just two club tricks. His only other loser would be a spade.

So, after drawing trumps, South led a low club and put up dummy's jack. Upon taking the queen, East returned a low spade, South winning with the king. Another club lead was now made from the closed hand, the board's king being put up. This was captured by East's ace. When play had ended, declarer had lost three clubs and a spade.

After drawing trumps, declarer should have cashed the diamond ace, after which dummy's remaining diamond would be ruffed. Next would come the ace and king of spades, followed by a third spade lead which West, let us say, would win the queen. Whatever West now returned, declarer would be home safely.

If West played back a spade (or a diamond if, in theory, he had one), it would be ruffed in dummy as South discarded a club from his own hand. And if West played back a club (which he would have done), dummy's jack would be taken by East's queen.

East would now be end played. A club return would make a winner out of dummy's king, while a diamond return would enable South to discard a club as he ruffed the trick in dummy. Thus declarer had it in his power to set up an end play situation.

FUN WITH FIGURES

"I've seen odd Wills in my time," said Vernon. "But today there was a real dandy."

Clare smiled. "I guess that's one way to make oneself remembered.

"Sure, but listen to this," her husband replied. "The old chap left his 499 Propex shares to the three children, but subject to the square of the girl's share being half the product of the two sons' shares."

Certainly odd, but it did work out. So how would the shares be divided up?

Mid-July Flower Sowing

With a new garden and not too much growing in it, anyone would be excused for wanting to sow a few flower seeds in mid-July.

After all, we are still sowing vegetable seeds this weekend with the full expectation of gathering peas and beans, carrots and beets before the end of September, so why not a few quick flowers?

The warm soil of summer helps seeds to germinate in a few days if they are kept damp; and they will grow if there is humus in the soil to hold moisture at the roots while the young plants develop to flowering size.

Success will depend on the choice of seeds. They must be kinds that will not need transplanting and that will remain in flower during cooler days at the tail-end of summer into early fall. Some will even produce flowers until the year's end if November and December are mild.

The first to suggest is the glowingly beautiful California poppy (Eschscholzia). Saucer-shaped flowers on four-inch stems are like the fall sun as it slips beneath the evening horizon.

Choose an open spot in full sun, add a sprinkling of sand over the area before sowing the seeds a inch or two apart, pressing them down into the sandy soil until just covered. Water gently, then wait a few days for the seeds to begin sprouting before watering again.

Once these poppy plants show above ground, water only occasionally to keep them growing but never too much as they like a pretty dry, gravelly growing place.

Another suggestion is mignonette (Reseda), for this is an annual flower that enjoys the cooler growing season after germination. It is believed that the best spikes of this fragrant flower are produced on early-fall plants, although stems will not be long.

Mignonette likes a richer soil than does California poppy, so work in screened compost or leafmould with the patch of soil chosen for sowing the seeds. Sow the few seeds thinly into compost, for the seedlings should have about a five-inch space for development. Keep moderately damp, and when flower buds are seen (not before), water with liquid fertilizer to strengthen the plants.

White Sweet alyssum is quite likely to succeed from a mid-July sowing, for this is a hardy annual often seen flowering during mild winters. Sow the fine seed as sparingly as possible where it is to flower, giving it a sunny spot and moderately good soil.

A little annual plant, well known at least by name among gardeners as Evening-scented Stock (Mathiola bicornis), is a weedy looking nonentity by day. As the sun gets lower in the western sky the slender plants become alive with sizable four-petaled lilac flowers which later fill the air from dusk to dawn with a clove-like scent.

Until this past week I had never seen this little plant in flower, although I had sown the seed many times in many gardens. It needs a leafy enriched soil that will hold moisture while the slender branching stems get a start.

Sow a pinch of seed thinly, keep shaded so that the soil never dries out, and then have patience to wait for that unexpected perfume when the first flowers open at dusk in late summer.

Not only for the open garden are these late treasures, for they will succeed equally well if the seeds are sown now in pots or planters on balconies where sun reaches. Patio tubs can also be utilized for the experiment to give perfume during outdoor meals of late fall.

These mid-July sowings to flower this year will also be a satisfying introduction to annuals for the gardener with a new piece of ground.

Beer An Attraction For All Sooke Day

Every year they say come early to All-Sooke Day but for Saturday they really mean it.

For one thing, there's beer. Just a little, and it's American.

And for another, there are no more reserved seats.

The Sooke logging sport finals begin at 1:15 p.m. Saturday but the doors open at 9:30 a.m.

"People should get there about 11 a.m., certainly by noon," says All-Sooke Day chairman Len Jones.

"Families can enjoy the salmon barbecue and get a good seat for the logging sports."

Beer will be available, starting about noon.

"We were able to get some beer but not as much as we wanted. Those who arrive early should have no trouble buying it."

Loggers from the U.S. and Canada will be competing in the traditional logging events.

The one-day show is at Sooke River Flats. Visitors from Victoria turn right on Phillips road, just past Sooke River bridge.

Elimination rounds in some logging sports will begin by 10 a.m. and barbecuing of salmon and beef will also be under way by then.

By doubling the admission charge to $2 (children under 12 free) the organizing committee was able to hold the price at $2.50 a plate for the meal, Jones said.

The day will conclude with awarding of prizes and a high-climbing act by John Harper about 4:30 p.m.

Also on the weekend there is a regional archery tournament at Juan de Fuca Arena and a Victoria International Festival concert Sunday night at McPherson Playhouse.

Here are the weekend events:

SATURDAY

9 a.m. Official opening, archery tournament, preliminary rounds begin, Juan de Fuca arena.

9:30 a.m. Doors open All-Sooke Day, Sooke River Flats.

10 a.m. Preliminary rounds logging sports, Sooke.

1:15 p.m. Logging sports finals begin, Sooke.

1:30 p.m. Archery tournament championship round begins, Juan de Fuca Arena.

4:30 p.m. Prize ceremony All-Sooke Day, Sooke.

SUNDAY

7 a.m. Archery tournament resumes, Juan de Fuca Arena, continuing until 4 p.m.

8 p.m. Festival concert, Beethoven, McPherson Playhouse.

Killer Bear Relocates

ROCKTON, Ont. (CP) — Smokey, the trained black bear that mauled 30-year-old Lynn Orser to death July 2, will be released from quarantine on Tuesday and off to a new home as soon as one is located.

Jim Harris, spokesman for the African Lion Safari and Game Farm in this community about 20 kilometres west of Hamilton, said Thursday that Smokey is in excellent health.

There was no evidence of rabies or any other kind of illness that might have led him to attack Miss Orser, the girl-friend of the bear's owner, David McKigney of Aurora, Ont., Harris said.

"We hope to find a home for him in some wildlife park in North America within the next week or two," Harris added.

The bear, taught to wrestle by McKigney, came into McKigney's home while its pen was being cleaned and mauled Miss Orser. She died about four hours later in hospital.

Head for the Hills; Suds Are Running

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — There's gold in those central British Columbia hills — but not all of it glitters.

The latest discovery is called Pacific Gold, a new light beer and the only suds currently being brewed in any quantity in the province.

A strike-lockout in the brewery industry, now in its second month, has left thirsty drinkers to fight over the declining supply of local beer and whatever imported brew can be brought into the province.

While the dispute has shut down other B.C. brewing operations, telephones are ringing off the hook at the new brewery here, as B.C. hotel owners swamp the outfit looking for beer.

"Orders are coming in like hell," said Bob Naismith, president of Prince George Breweries Ltd.

Naismith is a partner in the firm which took over the bankrupt Uncle Ben's Industries last month and began producing beer a short time later.

The brewery started making deliveries last week, and by the weekend the beer was in taps in northern and central hotels from Williams Lake to Fort Nelson.

More than 20 hotelmen visited the brewery on one day earlier this week seeking beer.

"Once the initial onslaught is over, we will be able to get everything more streamlined," Naismith said.

He said he is confident he can supply all local hotels, but is also anxious to crack the market in the Vancouver area, where hotel owners are relying on shipments of Rainer, Olympia and Schlitz beer from the United States to keep customers happy.

Naismith said the first bottled beer will be produced as soon as cartons and labels, promised by Tuesday, arrive. Beer will be trucked to Vancouver shortly after that, he said.

Naismith said the brewery will produce two million gallons a year of the light beer, which, unlike other light beers, has five-per-cent alcohol by volume.

CANNED SALMON LIMIT

VANCOUVER (CP) — A new fishing regulation, announced Thursday, will set a personal possession limit of 25 pounds of canned sport-caught salmon at a place other than the person's permanent home address, Dr. W. E. Johnson, director-general Fisheries Management, Pacific Region, said.

He said the new regulation is aimed at out-of-province visitors, who have been canning, daily, the catch limit of four salmon while on an extended stay in British Columbia.

17-YEAR-OLDS WIN WELFARE APPEAL

KELOWNA (CP) — An appeal board has ruled in favor of giving welfare for two pregnant 17-year-old girls, contrary to policy recently announced by Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm.

The two teenagers, who have not lived at home for several months, applied for welfare and were first turned down by city officials. They appealed the decison, and the board ruled 2-1 that they should receive benefits.

Vander Zalm had said earlier that people between the ages of 16 and 18, who no longer live at home, would be denied welfare benefits.

When informed of the appeal board decision, Vander Zalm said Thursday he wanted to see the details of the case immediately.

He said that if the circumstances surrounding the girls' case are not unusual, then the decision violates the intent of the new regulations and he therefore might reverse it.

The minister said there have been about a dozen appeals against his policy to cut most 16 to 18-year-olds off welfare. If there are many more, he said, the regulations may have to be rewritten to make them more explicit and the policy more understandable.

Appeal By CPU

VANCOUVER (CP) — Art Gruntman, western vice-president of the Canadian Paperworkers Union, said Thursday he has appealed to Dennis McDermott, president of the Canadian Labor Congress, for help to end the feud between his union and the International Woodworkers of America.

The fight heated up Wednesday when employees at Rim Forest Products Ltd. near Hazelton voted 64 to 36 against a certification bid by the IWA.

"I'm disappointed that the IWA, another CLC affiliate, seems bent on out-and-out war," Gruntman said.

CHINATOWN TRUCE OR NO $1M GRANT

VANCOUVER (CP) — Federal Urban Affairs Minister Andre Ouellet said the government will withdraw its $1 million contribution to a Chinese cultural centre unless two warring factions in Chinatown reach a truce within the next two months.

Ouellet said the Liberal government does not want to become involved in the dispute between the Chinese Cultural Centre and the Chinese Benevolent Association's Chinese-Canadian Activity Centre.

The cultural centre proposal was forwarded by the CCC, and in retaliation, the CBA started raising funds for its own activity centre.

"The project has to be a joint venture by the municipal government and the whole Chinese community," Ouellet said. "We have said we'll provide $1 million and now it's up to the city to approve the plan."

Food Prices Uncontrolled

B.C.'s food prices monitoring program has been totally ineffective in stopping price increases, Consumer Affairs Minister Rafe Mair said Thursday.

Mair said in an interview that the program, which until May was under his jurisidiction but now is in the hands of Agriculture Minister Jim Hewitt, is powerless to stop price increases.

He said provinces can do very little to control prices and that the federal government must take the necessary initiatives.

Finance Minister Evan Wolfe said in June, 1977, that B.C. would set up a prices review and monitoring board in an attempt to control inflation once the federal anti-inflation program was ended.

However, no such board has been set up, even though the federal plan was dismantled earlier this year.

"The fact of the matter, the cold hard fact, is that most of the products we use in B.C. come from outside the province and, indeed, many of the wage settlements that occur in B.C. either come from outside the province, or outside-the-province wages are the bench mark by which they are judged here in B.C.," Mair said.

"So, really, you're controlling a very, very small segment of wages and prices, and letting the rest of it run free."

Mair said prices inevitably will continue to increase, something which could lead to serious labor problems.

Building Peace But Salmon Strike Looms

Labor peace in B.C.'s hard-pressed construction industry seemed assured today but the vital salmon fishing industry appeared to be heading for a strike.

Jack Nichol, president of the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union, said Thursday three negotiating committees representing 4,300 shoreworkers and salmon fishermen will meet today to set a strike deadline.

Nichol announced the meeting in Prince Rupert after 3,000 shoreworkers voted 81.2 per cent in favor of striking.

Nichol said some areas have not reported vote results but he doubted a few straggling polls would change the over-all total.

He did not disclose the terms of the latest offer.

The president said that shoreworkers "certainly demonstrated in the most profound way that they're not prepared to accept what the (cannery) operators have on the table with the last offer."

Meanwhile, in Vancouver a tentative contract settlement for the construction industry was announced jointly by Chuck McVeigh, president of the Construction Labor Relations Association, and Jim Kinnaird, spokesman for a joint bargaining council representing 17 unions.

The settlement is the first in many years reached without third-party intervention.

About 40,000 construction workers and 850 contractors will now begin ratification votes, expected to take about a month, they said.

McVeigh said monetary terms of the contract are the same as those the council earlier refused earlier to take to the workers. It centres on a basic increase of $1.62 an hour over two years, he said.

Previous industry contracts expired April 30.

VANDER Z GETTING PICKY

Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm said today that no new single and employable applicants will be allowed to receive welfare in the Fraser Valley or Okanagan areas until all the current fruit and berry crop is picked.

Some Fraser Valley fruit growers said earlier this week that their berries are rotting on the vine because they cannot find enough pickers.

However, Okanagan fruit growers said they have more pickers than they need. As well, Richard Bullock, president of the British Columbia Fruit Growers Association, said reports of worker shortages are isolated, and in those cases it is usually the farmer who is at fault for his treatment of workers.

Thursday, more than 200 placard-waving demonstrators demanding higher welfare payments greeted Vander Zalm as he opened a new welfare office in Vancouver.

Death Sentence For Soviet Spy

MOSCOW (AP) — A Soviet court today sentenced Anatoly Filatov, a Soviet administrative worker, to death by firing squad for spying, the news agency Tass said.

The death verdict against Filatov, whom Tass called "an agent of a foreign intelligence service," came at the end of a week of well-publicized trials during which dissidents Anatoly Shcharansky and Alexander Ginzburg received labor camp sentences of 13 and eight years respectively.

Filatov is unknown to dissidents here and Western diplomats also claim they do not know him.

Shcharansky's sentence was two years less than the 15 requested by the prosecutor, the longest prison sentence allowed by Soviet law. The charge of treasonable espionage could have meant the death penalty, but the prosecutor had cited the defendant's youth and clean record and recommended leniency.

U.S. President Carter reiterated the U.S. position today in Bonn, West Germany, telling a news conference: "Our voice will not be stilled as we consider these violations, and others around the world, of human rights."

Earlier today, outside the courtroom, Shcharansky's 70-year-old mother, Ida Milgrom, stood in a light drizzle and read to reporters a statement thanking Carter for his support of her son.

Mrs. Milgrom had been barred from the courtroom every day of the five-day trial, although another son, Leonid, was admitted for all but secret sessions.

Natalia Shtiglits, who claims to be Shcharansky's wife, said Thursday she has a promise of continued U.S. support for her husband.

Miss Shtiglits met in Geneva Thursday with U.S. State Secretary Cyrus Vance and said afterward he told her the United States will "continue to act" until Shcharansky is free.

Meanwhile, strong sentiment was reported forming in the U.S. Senate to curb economic and technological assistance to the Soviet Union in retaliation for the continued persecution of Soviet dissidents.

And in London, British Foreign Secretary David Owen — reacting to the Shcharanky sentence and Thursday's sentencing of Soviet dissident leader Alexander Ginzburg to eight years of hard labor — has blocked a planned visit to London by a Soviet government minister.

B.F. Bratchenko, Soviet coal minister, was to have begun a U.K. visit Sunday.

In the British House of Commons, 120 members of Parliament signed an all-party motion expressing revulsion at the dissident trials and calling on Labor Prime Minister James Callaghan's government to take "appropriate action."

INUIT SETTLE WITH OTTAWA

OTTAWA (CP) — Inuit of the Western Arctic will own 95,830 square kilometres of land and receive $45 million under a tentative land settlement agreement announced today.

In return they will give up all claim to the 436,800 sqyare kilometres of the Western Arctic which includes the resource-rich Mackenzie River delta.

The announcement by Indian Affairs Minister Hugh Faulkner came in a joint position paper released by the government and the Committee for Original People's Entitlement (COPE), the organization representing 2,500 western Inuit — who refer to themselves as Inuvialuit.

Calling it a landmark in the government's program to reach settlement of northern claims, Faulkner said the proposal would allow Inuvialuit to participate in the economic development of the North while ensuring their cultural heritage would be protected.

Faulkner indicated the COPE agreement may serve as a model for future land claim settlements. He said no settlement in the Eastern Arctic, the Mackenzie delta or the Yukon will offer a better deal than COPE is getting.

Sam Raddi, COPE president, said the proposal reflects the interests of his people fairly, but said it is just a first step in reaching a final settlement.

Postal Row In Vancouver

VANCOUVER (CP) — A dispute over shift starting times has disrupted operations at the Vancouver post office.

Day shift workers joined a work stoppage that began Thursday night when workers remained in the cafeteria during their shift to protest changes in starting times.

Betty Amos, a post office spokesman, said some workers have refused to join the protest, but she could not say exactly how many employees were on the job or to what extent post office routine was being disrupted.

Amos said that as a result of the dispute mail deliveries in Vancouver would be minimal today. However, she said mail service for points outside Vancouver would be normal because mail for these centres was dispatched Thursday night.

Amos said employees were ordered back to work by union and management officials, but refused to comply.

Lloyd Ingram, local union president, said the dispute resembles a situation in London, Ont. in which one worker has had 16 different shift changes since mechanization began. Union officials say the post office's mechanization program is behind current moves to change shifts.

In Victoria, a post office spokesman said all operations are working normally.

Meanwhile, Bob Andstein, president of the postal union's Nova Scotia local, said Thursday that unless post office management improves its contract offer to the Canadian Union of Postal Workers by mid-August the postal workers will be on strike by the first of September.

Andstein said in Halifax 92 per cent of the union's members have voted to support the union's monetary demands in the new contract. The vote was conducted last weekend.

The postal workers contract, which expired 13 months ago, has been under renegotiation for the last 15 months.

The dispute was turned over to a conciliation board in March and a report from that body is expected by mid-August, Andstein said in an interview.

"If the employer's position is negative, as it has been in the past, then we'll be on strike by the beginning of September," he said, later adding that if the postal workers do strike it will signal a long shutdown of the post office because "the employer will try to smash the union."

The union's five-part wage demands were sent to the federal treasury board Thursday, Andstein said.

Among other things, the demand seeks reclassifications, improvements in the cost of living allowance formula, a catchup settlement to offset inflation plus a general wage increase.

FORESTS IN TROUBLE

B.C. could be on its way to one of its worst forest fire seasons in recent years, a government spokesman said Thursday.

Arnold Ginnever, program manager for the government's forest protection program, said that if current weather trends continue, "we would be in trouble, there's no doubt about it."

Cost of fighting the fires this year has risen to $3.2 million, more than three times the amount for the same period last year.

The government has spent $1.6 million fighting fires in the Prince Rupert district alone, he said.

Ginnever said that July and August are traditionally dry months in B.C.

Meanwhile, H. G. Doerkson, provincial forest fire suppression officer, said in a news release that if B.C.'s weather continues its abnormally dry, warm and sunny trend, the entire province could be facing high to extreme forest fire danger for the balance of the summer.

Ninety-four new fires were reported this week, he said, bringing the total for this year to 790, compared with 759 for the same period last year.

Seventy-nine fires were still burning Thursday, Doerkson said.

Indian Fishing Ban 'Powder-keg'

Times News Services

VANCOUVER — Fighting is feared this weekend between Indians and federal fisheries officers over cutbacks in native fishing days on the Fraser River.

A special detail of fisheries officers was sent Thursday to Lillooet — the expected trouble spot — where seven Indian bands have said they will ignore new fishing bans introduced because of low salmon counts.

The Indians insist they should not suffer for poor management and over-fishing by the white man.

Chief Victor Adolf of the Foundation Band said the 500-plus Indian fishermen in the area will not resort to violence although "we are all prepared to go to jail."

But others worry that there will be a physical confrontation.

"We're sitting on a powder-keg," one fisheries officer said.

The Indian revolt was sparked by an International Pacific Salmon Fishing Commission (IPSFC) decision to scrap the first two days of the normal four straight days of fishing for natives north of Boston Bar.

That means no fishing Thursday or Friday this week from Boston Bar to Texas Creek and no fishing Monday or Tuesday from Texas Creek to Churn Creek.

IPSFC chairman Rod Hourston said the ban is necessary because of low counts of sockeye headed for Stuart Lake spawning grounds near Fort St. James — the first major salmon run of the year. He said the expected 250,000-fish count is down by 50,000 and the ban will hopefully rectify the situation.

New Westminster district fisheries supervisor Lyle Freeman said the situation is an emergency and if Indians ignore the ban his officers are ready to enforce the law "to protect spawning grounds and to provide food for the isolated bands in the north."

Fifteen extra officers were sent to Lillooet Thursday. There are normally one full-time and three part-time agents. And the RCMP has been advised of the situation.

Freeman said the officers will not wear guns even though some men have been shot at in the past years, apparently by poachers. His men have been ordered to use discretion.

OTTAWA AD BILL TOPS $27 MILLION

OTTAWA (CP)-By the time the federal government and its agencies finished promoting everything from Loto Canada tickets to flying Air Canada, the 1977 federal advertising bill came to slightly more than $27 million.

The information came as the result of request last October by Progressive Conservative MP James Balfour (Regina East) for a written record of all government advertising for the previous year.

It took nine months and cost at least $2,000 for the government to compile the information, officials said.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Richardson show radial tire that came apart

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Things that go bump in the night are not nearly as frightening as those that go thump in the daylight, especially when driving along the highway.

"We couldn't figure out what was banging," said Charles Richardson of Sooke. "We thought maybe it was something in the glove compartment.

"We stopped the car to investigate and discovered our front left tire was coming apart. It was peeling away and the pieces were thumping against the fender."

"I was terrified," added Mrs. Richardson. "It was about 200 feet down to the river on the left. If the tire had blown, we'd have been finished."

The couple was driving home after visiting relatives in Grande Prairie, Alberta, and were near Edson, heading towards Jasper, when the tire came apart.

It didn't blow but it had to be replaced with the spare.

"My tires are Firestone 500s and after reading in the papers about the problems they are having in the United States, I thought I should report this. It is happening here."

In the U.S., hearings are being held by Congress to determine whether the Firestone 500 tire should be recalled by the company.

Rep. John Moss (D-Calif.), House investigations subcommittee chairman, said there is a clear indication of a safety problem.

The committee will decide whether to order a recall after a public hearing Aug. 7.

There are more than 13 million Firestone 500 tires being used in North America. The company says there is no evidence to justify recalling all 13 million tires.

Richardson said his tires had gone about 40,000 miles in four years.

"The tires came with the car when I bought it."

Richardson said the tires seemed fine before he left on the trip to Grande Prairie. Also he had the wheels aligned so the problem couldn't be there.

There was no advance warning of trouble before the tire started coming apart.

Richardson said the tires retail at $70 each. He has been offered a new one at $38.

But he's thinking about getting all four tires replaced.

"Having a tire unravel when you're driving on the highway is not something you forget in a hurry," he said.

'LITTLE ANYONE CAN DO'

Subtrades Face Impasse

The general contractor on the federal government's new Ocean Sciences building at Pat Bay refused today to reply to complaints he is withholding money owing several sub-trades.

"No comment," was all Greg Cabana, manager of Wessex Construction Co. Ltd. would say.

On Thursday Saanich Tory MP Donald Munro said he'd try to help the subtrades get money coming to them.

But he said he is being frustrated by bureaucratic red tape.

The federal department of public works, owners of the building, have refused to give Wessex its final payment until the creditors are satisfied.

A spokesman for Cana Construction, management contractor on the project, said there is only one case where the government would pay the subtrades directly — if Wessex filed for bankrupcy.

But if Wessex decides to do nothing, he said, there is little anyone can do.

The company is registered at the provincial companies office and lists Cabana's wife, Margaret Ellen Cabana, as president, secretary and sole director.

The Cabanas have eight other companies registered at the office, including Cabana Coach, Cabana Holding, Cabana Homes and Development, Cabana Imports, Canada Investments, Cabana Properties, Cabana Structures and Cabana Trucking.

The Cana spokesman said there is no simple answer.

Ed Gait, owner of GWG Rentals, one of the subtrades involved, blamed much of the problem on the way the federal government is tendering large construction projects.

He said the government puts the onus on the general contractor to clear up outstanding accounts and does not shoulder any responsibility itself.

"The sub-trades are being caught in the middle," he said.

He said if he as owner were building a house he'd be responsible for the accounts of subtrades in the event his general contractor didn't pay.

"Why shouldn't the federal government be made responsible too?"

Annie Loses Mast But Pushes Ahead

The Victoria yacht Annie Cadby, owned by Louis Lindholm of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club, has lost its mast in the Victoria-Maui sailing classic but is battling on.

A race committee official from the Royal Vancouver Yacht Club said the vessel was sailing in trade winds of between 15 and 20 knots when her spinnaker pole dipped in the water, putting great pressure on the Swan 44's mast.

The spokesman said Lindholm and his crew have jury-rigged the mast but the speed of the boat has been reduced to an average of 4.4 knots in the last two days.

Up until the mishap, the Annie Cadby had been doing well in her division but is now not expected to reach Maui until Tuesday or Wednesday.

The Annie Cady is 475 miles from Maui.

Three boats have completed the race.

The first to cross the finish line was Doug Fryer's Merlin of the Seattle Yacht Club, who finished Tuesday morning.

About 12 hours later she was followed by Warren Hinton's Drifter of the Lahaina Yacht Club. Third boat to finish was Irving Loube's Bravura, also of Lahaina.

Mayor Socks Rocks

If it was a lacrosse game, Mayor Mike Young probably would have been penalized for slashing, but what he did to the Victoria Shamrocks at Thursday's council meeting was perfectly legal.

Young took a recommendation that the club be given about $1,100 for a road trip and hacked it to $500.

The team was almost home-free on its grant bid, having already won support from council's finance committee, when it ran into Young's body-check.

"I can understand the enthusiasm of the committee in supporting the Shamrocks because they're doing a fantastic job," said the mayor, "... but if we subsidize their transportation costs it's going to cause gross problems and dilemmas in the future."

He said other sports organizations would soon be knocking on the door but the money to support them just wouldn't be there.

The Shamrocks had asked for the $1,100 to help pay their way to the Commonwealth Games in Edmonton this summer.

Ald. Murray Glazier, chairman of the finance committee, said he felt the club should get the money because it could help promote Victoria while visiting Edmonton and also because the Rocks contribute to the city financially through home game receipts.

Council rejected the suggestion of an $1,100 grant, however, and later voted to accept a motion to award the squad $500.

That, said Young, was as generous as he could get.

Clinic Children Could Be First Lottery Losers

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

A summer education program for handicapped children could be the first victim of the lottery war between Ottawa and Victoria.

All funds for the program, $22,000 a year, come from provincial lottery ticket sales.

But Ottawa is moving into the lottery business in a big way in November and Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy says this could mean the end of the provincial sales.

Deryck Thomson, administrator of the G.R. Pearkes Clinic for Handicapped Children, today said the end of provincial lottery revenues would be a severe blow to the clinic.

"Our only source of funds for the summer program is through provincial lottery sales by our women's auxiliary. This program is important and we hope it will be able to continue."

Handicapped students get therapy and schooling at the clinic from September to June but some of the students require this program during July and August as well, Thomson said.

The clinic is one of 40 non-profit organizations in the Victoria area funded through lottery sales. The provincial tickets raise about $430,000 here annually for charity.

Thomson calls the battle between Ottawa and Victoria "unfortunate and confusing."

Without judging the merits of arguments on both sides, he said it is clear that the provincial ticket program is of great benefit to hundreds of B.C. organizations.

"The jurisdictional problem will be resolved soon, I suspect, and I hope the provincial program can continue."

The 40 Victoria organizations funded through provincial ticket sales include service clubs, hospital auxiliaries and other non-profit groups. They are working to assist senior citizens, handicapped children, hospitals and amateur sports.

Across B.C. there are 275 organizations with 800,000 members selling provincial lottery tickets. More than half the total membership is involved in amateur sport programs at all age levels.

The lottery battle is between the federal government, which will be installing its Loto Canada ticket machines in B.C. this fall, and the province-run lotteries, the Express and Provincial.

McCarthy said the machines will greatly increase the sales of the federal tickets and could finish the provincial lotteries by year's end.

She will ask Premier Bennett to protest to Prime Minister Trudeau at a first ministers conference beginning Aug. 7.

McCarthy is also organizing petitions for the premier to take to Trudeau at the conference. The petitions would ask Ottawa to withdraw from the lottery scene by the end of 1979. She said the federal government in 1977 indicated it would not continue in the lottery business beyond the end of next year without the consent of the provinces.

However, only Nova Scotia has consented and still Ottawa is planning to stay in the lottery game on a permanent basis, she said.

Under the Criminal Code, Ottawa retains prior rights to lotteries.

Talks Continuing In Theatre Dispute

A meeting was under way today in a continuing effort to avert a strike by projectionists employed by Odeon and Famous Players theatres in B.C.

Neither management nor union spokesmen were available for comment this morning.

The 113 projectionists served 72-hour strike notice Tuesday and, according to the B.C. Projectionists Union, were legally entitled to strike at noon today.

The two main issues in dispute are wages and job security.

If a strike did occur, all but two movie theatres in Victoria would be closed — the Towne on Douglas and the Quadra at Quadra and Hillside.

Stock It to the Punks!

Out there somewhere there's a body brooding about vandals.

This poor soul — he or she didn't dare go public — sent in a clipping to us from Britain's Daily Telegraph. We suspect our anonymous mailer agrees with some of the suggestions offered by children who participated in a contest run by the Sussex county police.

The kids were asked how vandalism should be combatted.

The youngsters, God bless their bloodthirsty little hearts, offered up ideas ranging from shaving vandals' heads to dying their hair green. By and large, the children shrugged off the idea of fines and proposed instead "humiliating" physical punishment, including a return of the stocks, public birching and naming young offenders in the press.

But why stop there? How about hangings . . . maybe burnings at the stake . . .?

Traffic engineers speak in a language all their own and usually it takes municipal politicians years before they understand what's being said. But sometimes even old pros like Ald. Ron McKenzie are thrown.

At a city council meeting Thursday McKenzie looked at the terms of reference for a Douglas-Blanshard corridor study — and then he looked again.

McKenzie drew council's attention to the fact that the traffic consultants being hired to do the study would be asked to determine "a realistic range of 'external' transportation assumptions; e.g., modal-split expectations for the movements influenced by the corridor, and traffic generated for lands outside the immediate area of the corridor."

McKenzie scratched his head and said: "Quite frankly I think that's a bunch of jibberish."

"But that was in laymans' terms," said a helpful Ald. Bob Wright.

We can hardly wait to hear the technical language.

By the way, seen any good modal-splits lately?

For most Victorians today may be Friday and the start of a pleasant summer weekend of barbecuing, boating and wishing for an end to the beer strike.

Another B marks this day, the 189th anniversary of the storming of the feared Bastille prison in Paris which touched off the French revolution. Formal celebrations may be hard to find, but at midnight most of Victoria's French restaurateurs and the French staff of other establishments will gather at Stewart's in Market Square to commemorate the day.

Vive la France!

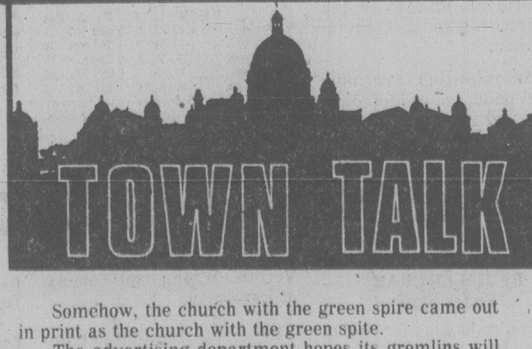
An ad placed in the Times on Saturday by St. John's Anglican Church extends a special welcome to visitors and residents from Manitoba.

The occasion: Manitoba Sunday.

The problem: those typographical gremlins.



TOWN TALK

Somehow, the church with the green spire came out in print as the church with the green spite.

The advertising department hopes its gremlins will be forgiven.

Waste-makers are legion in some areas of the federal civil service but believe it or not, Town Talk has found one of the people's servants who has his eye on saving the taxpayers' bucks.

His name — Ron Wood.

Recently Wood, assistant director of information for the Metric Commission, sent a letter to the Times saying he feels there are too many people on the nation's dailies receiving press releases and publications issued by the commission.

He suggested one per paper is enough. It'd be less costly and more efficient, too, he said.

A fervent Amen from us and we hope others follow his example.

Busiest Retiree in Show Business

Carol Burnett Turns Her Talent to Films

By DAN LEWIS

HOLLYWOOD — The door swung open and in popped Carol Burnett, to the surprise and delight of the assembled press.

"I guess you expect me to jump out of a prune danish," she said, marching up to the front of the room. What was she doing there? The occasion was an ABC session for the gathered television press to talk about dramatic fare coming up in the next season.

With characteristic radiance, Burnett walked to a slightly elevated platform and explained her presence at an ABC press function after 11 years of starring in a weekly series at CBS. The explanation is simple. Burnett will star in a dramatic movie for ABC.

It is titled "Friendly Fire," and is a true story about a broken-hearted family's efforts to learn the facts of their son's death in Vietnam during the conflict there. After hearing her son was a victim of "friendly fire," the mother (played by Burnett) discovers her son isn't even a statistic of the war and he is not listed among the casualties. His body, when returned home, is practically unmarked, except for a single, small bullet hole.

"The mother starts her personal investigation and discovers her son was a victim of one of many accidental deaths in which American soldiers were killed by American fire.

"The parents, staunch patriots, became protestors. They lived in a very patriotic neighborhood and soon they were fighting their neighbors: They took an ad out in the local newspaper, paying for it with their son's back pay, protesting this country's involvement in Vietnam.

"She became active in the Mothers For Peace movement, when it was not popular," Burnett said.

She will start production on "Friendly Fire" this summer

In the next 10 months, she will also star or co-star in three other films, two more for TV and one for theatrical release. She will also co-star with Dolly Parton, the country-music singing star, in a television special for CBS, and she recently completed a movie, "The Wedding."

All of this after she announced that she was retiring from her weekly series on CBS.

"I'm the busiest retiree around," said Burnett.

She's also found time to get involved in public issues for the first time. She's been actively working on behalf of the Equal Rights Amendment, recently traveling to Illinois at her own expense to plead for passage of the legislation in that state.

She explained how she joined the active ERA force:

"I was at a party several months ago and a friend started talking to me about ERA and I became interested. But I felt I should study both sides. So I got literature and I talked to lawyers and weighed it."

Now she's an ardent advocate.

"It (joining the ERA active force) happened at a good time for me," she continued. "I had time to do things. Now, I'm getting busy again, but whenever I'm off, I'm going to do what I can."

Her active participation will be limited in the coming months. "Friendly Fire" is next on her list. Then there are two other movies her husband Joe Hamilton will produce. One is Erma Bombeck's book, "The Grass Is Always Greener over the Sceptic Tank," and the other is "The 10th Month," another drama (for CBS). Then she will tape the special with Dolly Parton before going to Florida in February to co-star with Glenda Jackson in "Health", a spoof of the health-food industry.

"It's very nice to be able to pick and choose," Burnett explained, also pointing out that it is equally pleasing to her not to be locked into a demanding weekly series schedule.

Does that mean she will not — ever — do another series?

"I never say 'never.' " she responded. "Years ago, all I ever wanted to be was Ethel Merman, do only Broadway. Then television came to me and I loved it. I guess I'm a creature of television."

Television has not forsaken her. "Carol and Friends," a compilation of the very funny sketches from the 11 years of her weekly show, has been turned into a series of half-hour shows that are doing very well in syndication.

It has opened up a new audience of kids for her — kids who never got to see her 10 p.m. when the series played, but now can watch her in the syndicated version, which generally runs earlier in the evening.

"All of a sudden, little kids are coming up to me," she said happily.

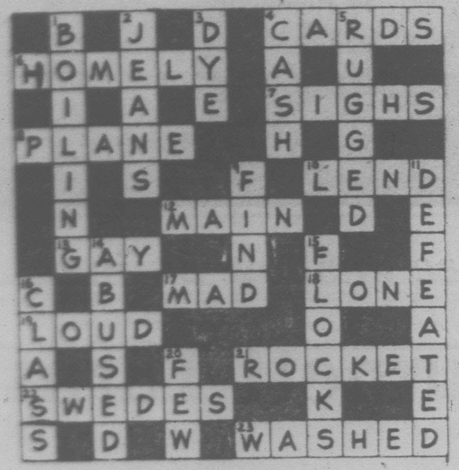
PAYOFF PUZZLE

Correct Answers to Last Week's Puzzle



CLUES DOWN

1. BOILING not toiling. "BOILING" links up more specifically with the theme of "laundering," and there seems no overriding reason to favor "toiling."

2. JEANS not beans. JEANS are a definite style, so a girl can reasonably state categorically that she does or doesn't like them. Beans, on the other hand, are not a specific product.

4. CASH not case. Despite the vocational nature of a doctor's work, it's "only reasonable" to expect him to be interested in CASH to some extent. This attitude of reasoned understanding is hardly required in the instance of case.

5. RUGGED not ragged. Being ragged has little directly to do with being more than a match for a frail person.

14. ABUSED not amused. There's apt to be shouting, etc., when a man is ABUSED. One who is merely amused is hardly driven to great outbursts of noisy laughter.

16. CLASS not glass. With supreme indifference to the wine's CLASS, or lack of it, such an alcoholic is apt to drink straight from the bottle — and certainly not, in any typical case, "one glass" of this or that.

CLUES ACROSS

4. CARDS not cares. A man is hardly as much at fault in his conduct of life to have cares, as he is to think too much about CARDS.
6. HOMELY not comely. A HOMELY or domesticated "type," yes; but to be comely is to be pretty, etc., not really a type of person.
7. SIGHS not sight. Her SIGHS, if any, will certainly be sad, but she may have the fortitude not to be a miserable sight.
10. LEND not mend or send. The clue has a certain note of excuse or justification, which suits LEND best (in the sense that people often have a way of expecting you to LEND possessions). Also, the clue tends to assume that if any thing is in your possession, that makes it theoretically possible for you to LEND/mend/send it; this is more universally true in the case of LEND.
12. MAIN not vain. Although objections may, in fact, have proved vain, they would hardly be categorized as "vain objections" in the immediate sense implied. (Nobody sould say, for instance, "What are your vain objections to this scheme?" or "My vain objections are . . .").
13. GAY not gas. A "word that describes" is characteristically an adjective (GAY) not a noun (gas, or gab).
17. MAD not bad. "Seemingly MAD confusion" matches up reasonably with the clue's theme of tumultuous combat, which is hardly to be criticized as seemingly bad in its lack of order.
18. LONE not love. Because of its solitary nature, a LONE indiscretion may not seem all that bad, whether or not it is a matter of love.
19. LOUD not lout. Loudness, more precisely than loutishness, is opposed to being "subdued or restrained."
21. ROCKET not locket. The consideration of weight links up better with ROCKET. Also, a locket is a case, rather than something possessing an "outer casing."
22. SWEDES not Sweden. Rather than the country, as territory, it is the people that can be said to give things to the world in an active sense.

SOAP OPERA SCENE

Romance in Paradise

By STEVEN SCHEUER

NEW YORK — The storyline concerning Dr. Peter Chapman on Guiding Light is very much in front focus on the soap. Chapman is not only dealing with a new romance in the hospital scenes but he is going through a series of flashbacks dealing with something that happened in a tropical paradise setting. The flashbacks will be interspersed with the present action on the popular soap for the rest of the summer, as a mystery about Dr. Chapman's previous life unfolds.

The flashback sequences also include a great deal of underwater scenes for which Curt Dawson (Dr. Chapman) and actress Eileen Dietz (she's Linette of the doctor's past) traveled to Nassau to film. In 13 days, Curt, Eileen and a small crew came up with some remarkable footage that will enhance viewers' pleasure during the next weeks.

"It may sound as if we were on a vacation," said Dawson, "but actually, we worked harder than we do in the studio. I went down to Nassau two days earlier and took scuba lessons in order to be able to film the underwater scenes. They talked about using a double, but I wanted to do it myself and talked the producers into it."

The photography for the splendid underwater sequences was handled by expert Al Giddings, who workedon The Deep and many superb documentaries requiring underwater photography.

"Giddings got some truly great shots," said Dawson. "The underwater scenes are remarkably beautiful and they add to the show immeasurably."

Dawson has been with Guiding Light since late last year and already he's become one of the show's most popular characters. His Dr. Chapman is a complex man but basically a good guy, and Curt has played his share of heavies to appreciate playing a nice person for a change.

CHANNEL CHATTER: Elizabeth Stack, the daughter of veteran actor Robert Stack and actress Rosemarie Bowe, has been added to the cast of Love of Life in the role of Cherie Manning. She's done some episodic prime time roles but this is her first entry into the world of daytime serials. Elizabeth knows that while there are certain benefits in having Robert Stack as her father, her own talent is the only thing that will bring her success. "My parents have been supportive," she says, "but they have also made me aware of what the business is like" . . . Michael Storm (Larry Wolek in One Life to Live) has opened in the Off-Broadway play, Just the Immediate Family, at the Hudson Guild Theatre, the group which premiered the award-winning Broadway play, Da. Perhaps Michael's play will follow suit and go to Broadway . . . If the actor playing Lonnie Garrison on Search for Tomorrow looks familiar, it's Jack Ryland, who had had other featured roles on the daytime soaps, One Life to Live, Love of Life, Secret Storm, and Guiding Light.

PLOT PORTENTS: Kay continues to prove she's stronger than Derek on The Young and the Restless, winning every round against her younger, softer opponent. Newcomer Patty has boss Brock adopting a protective attitude at The Allegro, while the fun-loving Nikki creates havoc. Nikki's sister, Casey Reed, neglected lately, airs her problems.

April, using her strong powers of ESP, rushes to save Miles from Denise; and, in doing so, is involved in an accident on Edge of Night. Series fans will not want to miss this week's developments in which Denise finally gets what's coming to her.

Will Margo marry Mike on Days of Our Lives after the good medical report? It's crisis time for Don, another blow for Marlena, who is physically unable to take uch more this year. Julie's brother Steve quickly reveals his four-flushing colors, as the latest troublemaker on the show.

The dark side of Melinda's personality comes to light on One Life to Live. Is it possible that Dorian was right all along? In a not so predictable move, Vicki goes to bat for Karen.

On All My children, Benny is in the hospital recuperating from a motorcycle accident while Estelle reluctantly honeymoons with Billy Clyde, Erica hits a snag in her marriage plans with Tom — she must acquire an annulment, and it doesn't look good. Meanwhile, the usually cautious Phoebe blows her cover.

Delia's diligent efforts result in her finally getting her money back on Ryan's Hope. Meanwhile, in the Ryan household, Mary and Siobahn no longer hold back and are in open conflict at this time. Alas, little Edmund is very sick.

CURT DAWSON'S in deep water as Dr. Peter Chapman on Guiding Light. Elizabeth Stack, daughter of Robert Stack, joined Love of Life as Cherie Manning.

John Hearn's Collectibles

As much as I am opposed to the whole idea of collecting as an investment I will admit to a soft spot for old maps. They are rare, they are fragile, they are of great historical interest, they are beautiful, they come in the most limited of editions, they are expensive and the price can do nothing but grow.

Who can walk past an old handmade map without stopping to take a good look at it? Early maps are copper plate engravings, hand coloured in bright vegetable dyes. They may trade for as much as $1,000 apiece. The value is enhanced by the fact that early mapmaking was an art form, and the great cartographers of the 17th century — John Speed, Jan Jansson and William Blaeu — were famous for their beautiful and ornate work.

Here in Baccalearum (an early name for Canada meaning Land of the Codfish) — or Terra Nova or New France or Francisca — early maps showed us a group of islands just off the Asian mainland. Then came Ortelius' maps showing the St. Lawrence as far inland as Hochelaga (Montreal) but blissfully unaware of the Great Lakes. They appeared on early Canadian maps one at a time and it was not until the end of the 17th century that all five of the Great Lakes were discovered.

The phases of discovery in Canda are all laid out on the early maps. There was no West Coast before the end of the 18th century and no Northern coast until the mid 19th. Imagination ran high with those early mapmakers according to whom there was a great Western sea covering most of what is now B.C. and Alberta and a network of non-existent rivers all over Saskatchewan and Manitoba along which you could sail from Hudson's Bay to the Pacific.

As I said, the early mapmakers were artists and what is an artist without imagination? Maps made to accompany the wonderful tall tales of travel which were the best sellers of their day, tended to reflect the tall tales rather than the actual topography. The rivers of Saskatchewan and the great inland sea of British Columbia all originated from a voyage attributed to an Italian Admiral DeFonte around 1750. The map-makers loved it.

For the beginning map collector the best place to start is at your local museum. The Sigmud Samuel Gallery in Queen's Park Crescent, Toronto, has a fine collection and is also a mine of information.

There are also some specialty dealers who are definitely worth a visit. In the west, try the Antique Map & Print Gallery, 2860 West 5th. Avenue in Vancouver, while Ontarians should make a point of visiting The Map Room, 18 Birch Avenue, Toronto. Best advice — take your time and ask lots of questions.

Special request from Mrs. F. Macfie, 375 Walmer Road, Toronto, M5R 2Y3, who is looking for old song books from the 1920s and 1930s or earlier. She has a friend who likes to play for senior citizens at Homes where they live but cannot remember all the words; lets help her out.

Readers letters should be addressed to Collectors Items, c/o Victoria Press, R.R. No. 1, Lowbanks, Ontario, N0A 1K0.

Don Retzer at work

The Human Touch

Among the skilled artisans whose craft, dating back thousands of years, still flourishes today is the blacksmith. As This Land shows, on CBC Sunday July 16 at 9 p.m., smithing is not a dying art in an age of mass production and increasingly sophisticated technology.

To illustrate this point, producer-director John Lackie shows the continuity of this ancient skill through the activities of a young man, Don Retzer, who finds meaning in thiskind of work, and through the practical philosophy of a 90-year-old blacksmith, Walter Cameron, who is still working in the forge.

Like many young people today, Don Retzer is in search of a future — not just work, but a vocation that has some significance and challenge, and a rewarding sense of self-reliance and independence. With his love of horses and the land an working with his hands he finds fulfillment in the art of blacksmithing.

Walter Cameron — looking at least two decades younger than his 90 years — recounts his experiences as a blacksmith with considerable relish. He began in the trade in 1912 and has had a full and contented life. He seems ready to start all over again and put in another 60-odd years at the anvil.

Blues Double-Bill on Nine

In Performance at Wolf Trap's popular double-bill evening of blues with Bonnie Raitt and Mose Allison, returns to Channel 9 Monday, July 17, at 9 p.m.

The concert features separate performances by Miss Raitt, the young rock-blues stylist, and Allison, who's been mixing his own unique blend of blues and jazz since the early 1950's.

"Love Has No Pride," by Eric Kaz, "Give It Up," a song Miss Raitt wrote espousing the feminist movement, and)"Everybody's Cryin' Mercy," a song she borrowed from Allison, are some of the songs she will perform on the sepecial.

Miss Raitt learned to play the blues from some of the best and oldest bluesmen in America. She features many of their songs in her performance as a tribute to their talent.

Although she sings to build a lyric monument to those old bluesmen who taught her how to play, her own blues-rock style is softer, more contemporary, and her lyrics encompass the political and feminist movements.

Some of the songs Allison and his trio perform on the special include, "Seventh Son," written by Willie Dixon, "You Are My Sunshine," by Jim Davis and Duke Ellington' "I Ain't Got Nothing But The Blues." Allison also performs original tunes and is known for tailoring both to his own special kind of humor and his own point of view.

Wonderful Hal

Wonderful Hal Holbrook may be the definitive Mark Twain (he does a three-hour makeup to get into character even for one-night stands in college auditoriums), but he has no patent on the role that won him some of TV's top awards. If all works out, John Raitt will star as Twain in a new musical.

For Love Or Money

"NBC's Best Seller: Seventh Avenue," the rags-to-riches account of a young man's struggle to make a career for himself in new York City's garment district, will rebroadcast in three episodes on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, July 16, 17, 18.

Steven Keats stars as Jay Blackman, a proud young man from new York's Lower east Side, who has been unsuccessful in finding steady employment.

As the first episode begins, the Depression is winding to a close. However, Jay has turned to crashing banquets and stealing food to feed himself, his parents and his brother, Al (Kristoffer Tabori), a law school student.

Jay's life changes when he attends a wedding reception and meets Rhoda Gold (Dori Brenner), a clerk in a Brooklyn dress shop, and marty Cass (John Pleshette), a Seventh Avenue showroom owner.

He decides to pursue a career in the fast-paced and often ruthless garment business. And, he pursues his love interest in Rhoda.

In the second episode, Jay's phenomenal success as a retailer of women's garments provokes a serious backlash from his threatened competitors. His neglected wife turns to drugs, and Jay turns to fashion designer Eva Meyers (Jane Seymour).

As the Seventh Avenue saga draws to a conclusion, Jay's professional career — as the owner of a Seventh Avenue showroom — and his life are in jeopardy.

His wife has left him and his affair has fizzled.

When his old friend, Joe Vitelli (Herschell Bernardi), is slain Jay suspects the underworld. His fears are confirmed when a new man replaces Vitelli and leads a general strike against the garment industry.

When Eva Meyers flees Frank Topo (Richard Dimitri), the hoodlum with whom she has suffered through a brief affair, Jay sets out — to see Topo behind bars before he destroys his business and carrries through threats on his personal life.

Steven Keats and Dori Brenner star as a young couple whose few blissful moments are soon ruined by his singular preoccupation with becoming a success in the garment industry in "NBC's Best Seller: Seventh Avenue," Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, July 16, 17 and 18.

Remote Community Gets CBC Radio, TV

Approximately 500 people in Spence Bay, Northwest Territories, are CBC's newest listeners and viewers.

Transmitters of the CBC's Northern Service have been turned on in the predominantly Inuit community on the Boothia Peninsula some 1,000 kms north of Winnipeg.

Service to Spence Bay is part of the CBC's accelerated coverage plan taking radio and television to all unserved Canadian communities of 500 or more people. The ACP was announced by the Secretary of State in 1974 in keeping with the Broadcasting act of 1968 which mandates the CBC to extend the national broadcasting service to all parts of Canada as public funds become available.

CBC Radio programs heard in Spence Bay include English language national network shows such as As It Happens, Sunday Morning, Cross Country Check-Up, and the World At Six and a daily French-language newscast, as well as northern service programs in English and Inuktitut (the language of the Inuit).

CBC national network programs are shown on northern television in Spence Bay. Other programs are especially produced by the northern service and chosen or commissioned from non-CBC sources. These include half an hour a week in Inuktitut. More northern, native-language programming is scheduled for the next television season.

Opera Theatre Presents Yeomen of the Guard

Gilbert and Sullivan's most serious light opera, "The Yoemen of the Guard," concerning love and intrigue in and around London's infamous Tower, airs as part of Public TV 9's Opera Theatre Thursday, July 20, at 8 p.m. The operetta is a newly staged BBC production.

The story centres on the fate of Colonel Fairfax who, condemned to be beheaded, is saved in the nick of time by a disguise. The confusion that this creates, and Fairfax's involvement with the strolling singer Elsie Maynard and with Phoebe, daughter of Sergeant Meryll of the Yeomen of the Guard, leads to many plots and counter-plots before the final curtain. David Hillman plays the colonel, Valerie Masterson is Elsie, Jane Hughes portrays Phoebe, and Bryan Drakes the Sergeant.

The large cast, which includes dances, jugglers and tumblers, is also high-lighted by the roles of Wilfrd Shadbolt (Dennis Wicks), head jailer and Assistant Tormentor; and Jack Point (Derek Hammond-Stroud), the merryman whose "I Have a Song to Sing-O" is a favorite of the opera.

The new Philharmonia Orchestra is conducted by David Lloyd-Jones and the production features the Ambrosian Opera chorus led by Chorus master John McCarthy.

Opera Theatre is a presentation of WNET/New York with major funding made possible by Public Television Stations with additional support from the Nate B. and Francis Spingold Foundation. Special funding is provided by Monsant Fund, the Jerome Foundation, the Surdna Foundation, the Martha Bair Rockefeller Foundation, and the national Opera Institute.

ONLY LT. CMDR. MATT SHERMAN (John Astin, right) could laugh in the face of danger as Lieutenants Barbara Duran (Jamie Lee Curtis) and Nick Holden inform him that two Japanese destroyers are closing in on their submarine and that they can't submerge because of a stuck valve in the "Out of the Sea Came a Marine" episode of the ABC Television Network's "Operation Petticoat," airing Friday, July 21 at 7 p.m. on Channel 8, and 8:30 p.m. on 4.

Somebody's Watching Us

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jack Webb thinks it is possible somebody out there is watching us.

"With millions and millions of planets in space, I cannot believe we're alone," said Webb, once the star of Dragnet and now executive producer of the NBC series Project U.F.O.

"I think there are other lives out there, both advanced and primitive civilizations. We've got to look outward. Just as we had a westward expansion, we've got to havs a space expansion."

Webb, however, sticks close to the documents from the United States Air Force's Project Blue Book in the popular new series Project U.F.O.

That is not to say, however, that the series isn't hyped with special effects of spaceships and extraterrestial beings. In fact, a casual viewer might get the idea that the spaceships are for real rather than a re-creation of someone's reported sighting.

"We're not saying they're from outer space," Webb said. "We can't say that and the U.S. government can't say that until one lands. But I think people are more willing to accept the fact that it could be machines from another planet.

Project U.F.O. premiered earlier this year, riding a crest of interest in space and UFOs spurred by such movies as Star Wars and Close Encounters of the Third Kind.

Webb acquired a microfilm of Operation Blue Book's voluminous documents, dating back to 1947, after it became public under the U.S. Freedom of Information Act.

In the past 30 years, an estimated 15 million Americans say they have seen unidentified flying objects. Their ranks include astronauts, pilots, policemen, military personnel, and even President Carter, when he was governor of Georgia. Numerous sightings have been reported around the world.

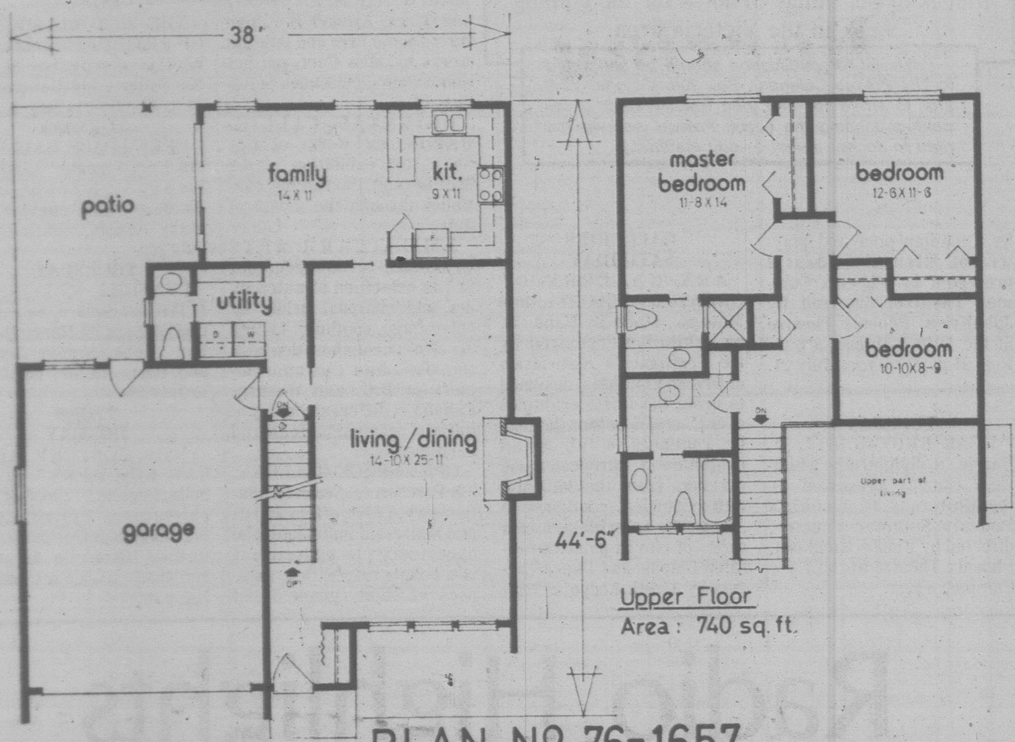
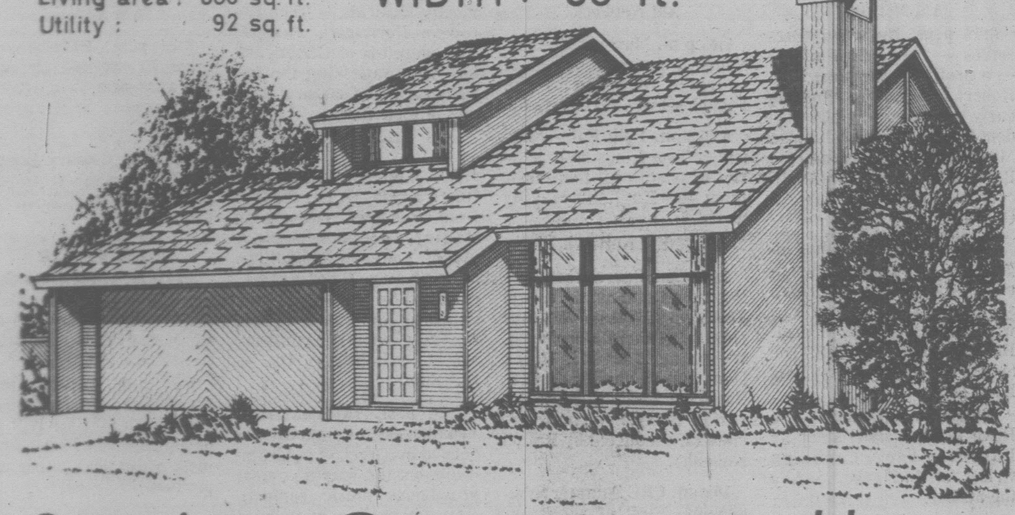
Home of the Week



Main Floor

Living area : 886 sq. ft.
Utility : 92 sq. ft.

PLAN No. 76-1657
WIDTH : 38 ft.



Spacious Contemporary Home

Well-suited to the medium frontage lot, this three bedroom, full basement, design has the appearance of a sculptural form carved into space. The exterior, with cedar shake roof, mixed horizontal, diagonal and vertical siding and framed chimney, is so well-integrated it would doubtless seem part of any natural environment in which it were built.

From the compact entrance foyer you move naturally right into the long rectangular living/dining room combination, which features full-height windows and a brick-faced, energy-efficient fireplace which is about 30 per cent more effective than the conventional masonry structure.

The U-shaped kitchen separates from the large family room via convenient snack bar counter for those casual family meals, and from the dining room through a pocket door, providing for separation of simultaneous family meals and more formal entertaining. The family room connects to the large rear patio through sliding glass doors — allowing easy access for summer barbecues. The patio is in full view of the kitchen, for instant supervision of small children playing outdoors.

Also connecting to the family room via pocket door are the utility room, with washer, dryer and folding counter, and the two-piece vanity bath. The double full garage has also ready access to both the patio and vanity bath.

All three bedrooms are upstairs, and all have good exposure for natural light and liberal closet storage. The master has a three-piece ensuite with shower, and could easily have a second vanity sink installed in the wide counter area.

The upstairs bath is unique in that it has a pocket door dividing tub, lavatory and vanity sink from a separate make-up or vanity area — allowing simultaneous bathroom function on busy mornings.

A full basement provides abundant storage facilities and space for the future development of a recreation room, wet bar, and/or additional bedrooms.

A very high-styled and practical design for the modern family which requires spaciousness and a range of convenience facilities.

Plans for design No. 76-1657 may be purchased either by single set, at a cost of $70. for the first set and $10. for each additional set, or by the package. Q. I'm curious. Could you tell me how many television sets are owned in the U.S.? — P.B. Newton Falls, Ohio.

A. According to the A.C. Nielsen Co., which keeps track of this sort of thing, 98 per cent of American households or 72.9 million households, have more than one set. In addition, 78 per cent of television-owning households have color.

Q. Could you tell me where I can write to Bruce Jenner, the famous decathlon champ? — L.A. Warren, Ohio.

A. I suggest you write to ABC Television, 4151 Prospect Ave., Hollywood, Calif. 90027.

Q. Now that comic Steve Martin is famous, please settle a dispute. Wasn't Martin a regular on the Ray Stevens Show a couple of summers ago? — K.H. Eugene, Ore.

A. You are correct. The short summer replacement series subbed for Andy Williams on NBC in 1970. Martin was a regular along with Dick Curtis, Carol Robinson, Florian Carr, Billy Van, Cass Elliott and Lulu.

Q. Why was the "Shields and Yarnell Show" taken off the air by CBS? — S.S. Burton, S.C.

A. Although the "Shields and Yarnell Show" was an innovative and often funny program, CBS cancelled the show because of poor ratings. Frankly, the show never had a chance in the time spot CBS placed it in — 8:30 on Tuesday nights. At that time, ABC airs its top rated "Laverne and Shirley."

Q. Television can be confusing at times. I recently saw a movie entitled "The Nun and the Gun" and I swear it looked like two episodes of the old "Alias Smith and Jones" Western series. Am I right? — R.M. San Francisco, Calif.

A. You are probably right. It is a common practice for studios and producers to link two or more parts of a series into a feature length film. Normally, they put a new title on it and release it as a movie, often for showing abroad.

Q. What became of Lawrence Welk's son's wife, Tanya? She used to be on his program. I've missed her for awhile now. — T.J., Milton, N.Y.

A. Tanya Welk has been away from the weekly "Lawrence Welk Show" for about a year now. She voluntarily departed from the show to pursue a nightclub career that both she and her father-in-law agreed was the next move to make.

Mermaids and Ikons: A Greek Summer is Gwendolyn MacEwen's tenth book and her first work of non-fiction. Best known as a poet (a collection of poems titled The Shadow-Maker won her a Governor-General's Award in 1969), she has also written two novels and a collection of short stories.

MacEwen (now 37) cuts rather a romantic figure on the Canlit scene; her first published poem appeared in the Canadian Forum when she was 15 and three years later she was launched on a full-time career as a writer. Her interests are exotic and even arcane: space exploration is as compatible a subject as ancient Egypt and she has translated some modern Arabic poetry. In Mermaids and Ikons she explores her impressions of contemporary Greece in typical MacEwen style. Lowell Thomas was never like this.

Always and everywhere, MacEwen is conscious of Greece's glorious past; for her it exists side-by-side with the more mundane present. She goes to Olympia, for example, has "several glasses of the local wine," drowses in the sun and strikes up a conversation with Phidias. (the Phidias, who sculpted "the great statue of Zeus.") At Mystras, she searches in vain for the ghost of the Emperor Constantine which is said to appear as a "great white horse" hovering over the abandond city, and has to be content with a vision of Constantine himself, at his coronation. ("This is accident, a miracle. I merely record what I saw.")

Other excesses include a predilection for superlatives ("Terrific," "exquisite," "colossal," "marvellous," "gigantic," "amazing" are favorite adjectives) and a rampant egotism which reveals itself in cutesy colloquialisms and snide remarks about fellow sightseers. Here's an example of MacEwen's style at its worst: "I think it was Saturday when we went to Mycenae. I can't be sure, but I'm going by the feeling that certain days have certain colors, and this was a blonde day — dusty blonde, to be more precise."

Now that we have all that over with, we are free to consider MacEwen at her best. Personal idiosyncracies aside (and aside is as far removed as they get; it is impossible to block them out totally), Mermaids and Ikons: A Greek Summer does impart a subtle sense of Greek personality, culture and experience which no more orthodox travel guide could possibly equal.

Inexperience makes me unable to assess the degree of truth in MacEwen's insights into Greece, but several of them are arresting enough to be convincing. "What a fight the Greeks put up when all is lost!", she will say, about a soccer game, or "Greece presents a very real challenge to whoever goes there — a challenge to do more, to be more, to better the present moment in whatever way is possible, to improvise, to expand."

She is especially interesting on the subject of light, which strikes her as "the final mystery." ("You can't really begin to think in Greece until things get dark . . . All those tons of sunlight hammering away at the pillars of the Acropolis makes history too lucid to be real . . .")

As an interpreter of old mysteries to new eyes, MacEwen is instinctively and hopelessly romantic. She enters an ancient village chapel, for example, where "the area of the Holy Altar" is out of bounds to women. "God can get me if He wants," she thinks, "I'm going in anyway." She finds a crucifix carved from a Coca-Cola crate and bashes her head on a lamp of burning oil. Her reaction?: "God was not displeased — I have been anointed."

What does evoke a chuckle is the "astoundingly beautiful" statue of Hermes by Praxiteles: "The big toes drove me mad, until I got to the ankles, at which point I was on the verge of an epileptic fit . . . I walked slowly round and round, carefully avoiding the torso and its components. (The components are left to the reader as they should be . . . Suffice it to say that they componed.)"

Mermaids and Ikons: A Greek Summer is a deceptive little book (it is only 110 pages long), for it contains a great deal more than meets the eye. It's a minor work, but it manages to convey a strong sense of the Greek personality as perceived by one determindedly distinctive, but frequently typical, Canadian personality. It won't tell you what to bring, what to wear and how much things cost, but it will tell you, if you read it carefully, where to go and what, if you're both sensitive and lucky, you might manage to see.

Nobody Believes Him, Even Telling Truth

By AL FORREST

This book deserves to be accepted on its own terms.

The first reviewers seemed more interested in settling old scores than assessing new evidence.

You know, like the familiar joke:

Father: "Stop that, son, I told you never to kick someone when they're down."

Son: "But, gee whiz, dad, that's the reason I got him down in the first place."

But Nixon is not only down, he's out of politics and it seems only fair to give him a hearing, even if he didn't get his day in court.

In terms of style, Nixon's book is smooth and well-written. The story flows forward in chronological order.

A proper mess

The argument is less smooth, of course, but then the captain of the Titanic would have had similar problems if he had a chance to write his life story.

Nixon concedes he made a proper mess of his last two years in office but asks the reader to remember his achievements — an accord with China, the end of the war in Vietnam.

History must judge me, Nixon says, and he says he is confident its verdict will be more kindly than the contemporary press has been.

That is the question Nixon raises and it is an interesting one. How will history judge him? We can not know for sure, but it is clear he can never hope to hide his personal shame behind the shield of his achievements, even in the history books.

It is like that other joke, a favorite of the business pages:

Boss to employees: "This is just a suggestion, of course, but don't forget who's making it."

And this book contains a list of achievements — but no one will ever forget whose achievements they were, never in a thousand years.

The Nixon personality will be remembered as long as the man is discussed. Nixon's reputation is best summed up by Nixon, himself, in this book when he discusses one erroneous charge brought against him.

Two important Watergate conversations were never recorded — one because it took place on his residence phone where there was no recording device, and the other because the tape had run out during the previous conversation.

The press said the two tapes were "missing" but Nixon said they couldn't be called missing because they never existed. Later, he was proved correct but by then it hardly mattered. He was out of office.

The point is that even on those cases when he told the truth, nobody believed him. It takes years of hard work to build up a reputation like that.

In his own account, Nixon comes across as incredibly stupid and inept as well as immoral. He never did learn who his real friends were. On those rare occasions when he decided to "do what is right" he could easily be talked out of it.

NIXON . . . tries for verdict of history

Mostly, Nixon's mind worked in strictly political terms and in a very narrow tunnel.

For example, when his former aide John Dean told a Watergate hearing he and Nixon had held 23 meetings to discuss a cover-up, Nixon's response was: he's lying, it was far less than 23 — not noticing that he had convicted himself by admitting to even one.

Nixon treats everyone kindly in his book, even Dean, who was his chief accuser.

Nixon always worried about Colson, however, because his brutal approach to politics created many enemies, and Nixon likewise worried about Ehrlichman because he sometimes seemed a little too pure.

Nixon told Ehrlichman: "You have always been the conscience of the administration. You were always for the cleanest way through things."

Ehrlichman replied: "If I was the conscience, then I haven't been very effective."

The book also shows the powerful influence Nixon's family had on him.

One morning at Camp David, his daughter Tricia told him the time had come to fire Haldeman and Ehrlichman, both of whom were under investigation in the Watergate cover-up.

"I am speaking for Julie, David and Mama as well," Tricia said, as though the family constituted some sort of cabinet. In any case, later that day Nixon told Haldeman and Ehrlichman to submit their resignations.

Nixon's book is not all Watergate, however, and some of the best parts are quotations from his diary on meetings with heads of state.

Nixon is an incorrigible gossip, not an admirable trait in a president but delightful in an author.

For example, in his historic meeting with the Chinese leaders, somehow the topic turned to sex.

Mao praised Kissinger for his cleverness in keeping his first trip to Peking a secret.

Kissinger replied he used his trips abroad with pretty girls as a cover.

"Anyone who uses pretty girls as a cover must be the greatest diplomat of all time," Nixon said.

Mao turned to Nixon. "So you often make use of your girls?"

His girls, not mine," Nixon replied. "It would get me into great trouble if I used girls as a cover."

They laughed

"Especially during an election," Premier Chou said, and everyone laughed.

It must be remembered this incredible conversation took place during the heat of the Vietnam war when many Americans were suggesting the U.S. should drop atomic weapons on China.

The leaders were following the advice of the street people and were making love, not war. At least they were talking about it, as men will.

In summary, this book is great gossip, interesting reading but a weak defence of the career of Richard Nixon.

There is nothing here to alter the general view that he was a liar, and a not very good one.

Clearly, Nixon is vacillating, whining, argumentative and petty. Writes a good book, though.

Tinkering with Dickens

By REG TERRY

Hard on the heels of the television "docu-drama" — the semi-fictionalized accounts of real people and events such as Watergate or the Kennedy assassination — comes the novel using real people as characters in fiction.

Frederick Busch has had the courage (gall?) to make Charles Dickens his subject in The Mutual Friend for a docu-drama of those harrowing last years when, riddled with anguish about his failed marriage and secret liaison with Ellen Ternan, doubting his powers as a novelist, worried about the financial security of his large family, Dickens embarked on a suicidal course of public readings in England and America, hastening his own death with a kind of greedy relish, but leaving a twin memorial as England's finest novelist and as an incredible actor.

It is a subject of overwhelming dramatic appeal in itself. These last years from the American reading tour of 1867-68 until Dickens' death in 1870 are apocalyptic, drawing into focus all the gaiety, recklessness, pride and torment of a genius once described as "the master of all hearts."

For his facts Busch relies as we all do on the letters, some memoirs (notably George Dolby's as Dickens' tour manager) and Edgar Johnson's splendid biography, now available in one volume.

His story is in fact told mainly from Dolby's adulatory and sometimes hurt standpoint, a biased view all the more unreliable by virtue of his apparently writing from the TB ward of a charity hospital in 1899.

This is the unreliable narrator with a vengeance, even when supplemented by testimony from other sources such as Georgina Hogarth, the sister of Dickens' wife, Kate, the abandoned wife herself, and a prostitute from Urania Cottage (a reference to the project Dickens launched with Baronness Coutts) who assists the sexual education of Dickens' youngest son, Plorn, in a scene of abject crudity.

Busch is nothing if not daring with his ideas, making Ellen Ternan give her version of the love affair — a rapid revulsion from the fumblings and gropings of a man old enough to be her father. Since we have in fact no record whatsoever of her relations with the novelist, this section makes for some amusement.

The next best thing by far is George Dolby's revolting account of doss-house life toward the end of the novel, a skilful integration of social history in which Busch can do something truly creative with his character and get far enough from his sources to make something imaginatively vital out of the material.

All of which points to the book's fundamental drawback. Everywhere one is conscious of the scholar's notes (Busch is a professor of 19th century fiction), the epigrams, the quotations from letters, the sources I have already quoted, which stand out like a row of teeth crudely stitched into the fabric of the novel. The characters are Madame Tussaud effigies with tape-recorders hidden in them.

Along with some unhappy juxtapositions of crude 20th century idiom and Victorian formality, there are some Americanisms that sit uncomfortably with the transcriptions of Dickens's usual wit and eloquence: He would never have said to Dolby "Go send telegraphs some place," especially in London. Nor would he have said "overly," or referred to "squash," which in England is still a game and not a vegetable.

One has only to recall what Dickens actually wrote about his adventures during the tour of America to be made uncomforrtable by Busch's narrative. For example: "We had an old buffalo for supper, and an old pig for breakfast, and we are going to have I don't know what for dinner at six" (Dickens). "Everyone stared at the man whose shoulders ended in paper and ink" (Busch).

It is unfair to expect a novel about Dickens to sound like Dickens, but one can fairly object to how Busch has diminished him. He emerges as a chilling, wizened monster, tottering through Syracuse or Utica or Preston and the north of England, dragging his unfeeling left leg and lathering himself in the frenzied readings, bullying a rather rancorous Dolby, dosing himself up with laudanum, maundering over his lost childhood and his lost Ellen, making a will, seeing ghosts, and greedily awaiting nemesis. This Dickens is more of a midget than a Titan.

A Former Ad Man Lashes Back at TV

By JULIAN REID

Outside of working hours, the average North American spends roughly half his waking life held mesmerized by the glare of the television-tube. This appalling statistic is so familiar that in most of us it induces not even a token knee-jerk of response. Yet it remains the most telling single indicator of the impact TV has on both our individual and our collective existence.

Over the past decades a great deal of ink has been spilled to elucidate the social and psychological dimensions of this new phenomenon. The debate has been vociferous but inconclusive, and few of the contributions to it are even marginally worth reading. Indeed, the cumulative impression they leave is that TV must be possessed of some occult power to muddy the thinking of its critics, driving them en masse to roundly miss the real point.

Which is why Jerry Mander's Four Arguments for the Elimination of Television is a very welcome book. To be sure, there is a certain amount herein that is questionable or even downright wrong-headed — but nevertheless this study is virtually unique in raising almost all the right questions and grappling with them in terms of an appropriately far-reaching frame of reference.

The author is a former adman turned apostate; and as such he is intimately familiar with the medium's power as an instrument of mass-manipulation and subliminal brain-washing. So familiar, in fact, that he tends to underestimate or neglect many other salient features of the televisual experience — and perhaps also to overrate the uniqueness of its social role as an hallucinogenic opiate of the contemporary populace. But even when this bias has been duly allowed for, the case he makes remains uncomfortably persuasive.

Briefly, Mander sees television as marking the culmination of a millenia-long trend towards substituting "totally artificial environments" for the natural world in which our forefathers evolved and had their being. As such, the medium bears a paramount responsibility for our present collective alienation from those "larger, non-human realities" that are the ultimate source of all life and meaning. Indeed, he argues, TV has narrowed and coarsened the broad range of human experience to the point where our entire culture is suffering from a kind of "mass sensory deprivation," accompanied by a wide variety of appropriately pathological symptoms.

Not only does television have the power to alienate us from the real world, it simultaneously works to reshape the human psyche, pouring it into an artificial mold properly responsive to the artificial demands of the industrial society.

It is no secret that commercial television is the tool of a select few industrial interests, the giant corporate advertisers who indirectly but effectively control its programming. And it is no secret, either, that it is in their collective interest to convert us all into voracious and uncomplaining "consumers," the mindless mainsprings of a commercially-oriented economy. Moreover, it is well-known that the chief function of large-scale advertising is to create and maintain this artificially-conditioned consumer-mentality.

But Mander contends that this particular effect of television is not simply an incidental consequence of the historical factors which handed control of our TV sets over to the commercial powers-that-be. Rather, he insists, this particular consequence is inherent in the medium itself, regardless of who controls it.

And it is hereabouts, I think, that his ingenious and persuasively documented indictment comes a cropper. Not that his contra-McLuhanesque analysis of the built-in biases and limitations of the medium is totally invalid — indeed, it may well be the most original and insightful part of the book. But all the same, it seems to me that Mander carries his thesis here too far and too fast, until at last he lets it run away with him entirely.

For one thing, I think he underestimates the extent to which the very factors he considers as "inherent" in the technology are in fact products of the complex interactions between that technology and the commercially-oriented culture that sustains it — a process analyzed at some length by John M. Phelan in last year's Mediaworld. After all, the very exceptions Mander cites to "prove" his rule that "the medium cannot deal with ambiguity, subtlety and diversity" (Ingmar Bergman's inspired Scenes from a Marriage is one) serve rather to demonstrate that, under the right circumstances, it both can and does.

Still more telling, however, is the consideration that analogous objections could reasonably have been raised at the time of the introduction of any new medium into history — from spoken language through writing and printing to the modern motion-picture. Each of these, every bit as much as television, tends to exclude or distort important facets of living reality; yet each of them, through the very rigor of its limitations, also possesses the power to enrich and illuminate experience as well as to impoverish it.

The danger comes only when a medium is systematically misused — and particularly when people fall into the comfortable snare of becoming "hooked" on it, more or less to the exclusion of all else. And few readers of Four Arguments for the Elimination of Television will be left with any doubt that TV has become a malignant and profoundly debilitating influence on a large part of the contemporary Western populace.

Yet to call for the utter elimination of television on these grounds, as Jerry Mander does, is, I believe, as misdirected as it is impracticable.

Alcatraz Caper

No one ever made a successful, proven escape from Alcatraz, the rock in San Francisco harbor that became the ultimate prison in the American system. But the best shot was taken by a Kentucky hillbilly named Bernie Coy and five companions.

They took over the main cellblock and except for some unbelievable setbacks might well have succeeded. Although these men were not famous criminals, the supporting cast includes such as Machine Gun Kelly and Stroud, the Birdman of Alcatraz.

Clark Howard is a successful novelist, and this work is obviously a labor of love. The book may well be considered a must by crime buffs, although its general interest is limited. — F.B.

A colorful history
Of the Russian Revolution

Last week I intended to discuss three books with the common theme of Russia. Instead, I devoted all my space to one: Tolstoy Remembered, by Tatyana Tolstoy. The background to that book was the far-off Russia of the late 19th century. Today, we move on to the revolutionary years, 1905-1917, and then, later still, to the post-Stalin era which, after a promising beginning, reverted to the familiar pattern of total repression of intellectual freedom.

Harrison Salisbury, veteran foreign correspondent, and for some 30 years Russian affairs expert for the New York Times, has now written his account of the Russian Revolution. The epic drama, with its featured players and cast of millions, is surely familiar to everyone, at least in outline. Apart from speculation and changes of emphasis the story, inevitably, remains essentially the same, no matter who writes it, and this won't alter until some unbiased foreign historian miraculously gains unrestricted access to Soviet archives.

Blundered into power

A simple recital of events which led to the culminating drama of October, 1917, shows how these were encumbered by trivia, petty rivalry, miscalculation, hesitation, ineptitude, posturing, and mistakes, and how, in fact, the Bolsheviks, divided and fighting against each other, blundered into power — with Lenin, until the final moments anyway, playing only an occasional role.

Now, when an old hand like Salisbury makes himself non persona grata in Moscow by pointing out this huge contrast between legend and reality, it usually indicates he is signalling his retirement from Kremlin-watching and is about to write his memoirs. To me, as an amused observer over the years, it also indicates the end of the rivalry that has persisted for 30 years between Salisbury and the redoutable Edward Crankshaw of The Observer of London.

Crankshaw was the first to go to Russia, as a serving officer with the British Military Mission from 1941-43. He returned after the war as a journalist at about the same time as Salisbury, who had served in Russia in 1944 as a war correspondent. During the next three decades both men distinguished themselves for their able reports and commentaries. The marked difference between them was that Crankshaw's writing, though better informed, was a trifle ponderous, whereas Salisbury, who was a superior newspaperman, favored colloquialisms and 'color' to add impact and atmosphere to his stories.

Salisbury, from the start, had difficulty piercing the surface, whereas Crankshaw, seeking greater depth, immersed himself in background so that over the years he became a historian and scholar while Salisbury, through inclination rather than lack of ability, remained a reporter. This became increasingly evident when they both turned to writing books; Salisbury's are more 'readable' but Crankshaw's are more important.

It must have pained Salisbury considerably when leading U.S. newspapers and periodicals used Crankshaw's background articles regularly. Even winning the Pulitzer Prize is small compensation when your rival 'expert' is triumphing in your own bailiwick.

Because the doctored Soviet version of the Russian Revolution is required reading in the Workers' Paradise, it is only natural that long-time Moscow hands should feel impelled to make the setting straight of the record their swansong. Crankshaw published his version two years ago, and now Salisbury has given us his. Comparisons may be odious and not strictly cricket but, in this instance, I can't resist.

Both men did a great deal of preparatory reading but while Crankshaw concentrated on historical sources Salisbury focussed his attention on memoirs and diaries which, though often unreliable, are certainly more colorful. Extracts from these editorialized accounts lend excitement to the story but they do tend to complicate things by introducing a bewildering number of superfluous characters.

History, journalism

Salisbury's Black Night, White Snow (the title is taken from a poem by Blok) covers the period 1905 to 1917 in more than 600 pages. Crankshaw's The Shadow of the Winter Palace (reviewed here Oct. 9, 1976) covers the period 1825 to 1917 in only 393 pages. The former has all the immediacy of eye-witness reporting and contains a vivid picture of the prevailing atmosphere of chaos, consternation and disbelief, whereas the latter also shows the drift to revolution, the conditions that made it inevitable.

Either book is well worth reading. All you have to decide is whether you prefer the more sober writing of a journalist turned historian-scholar or the more lively presentation of one who turns history into journalism. If, like me, you want to know not only what happened but why it happened the decision becomes simple.

With A Captive of Time, by Olga Ivinskaya, we move from the Russia of Nicholas and Alexandra, Rasputin, Yusopov, Kerensky, Lenin and Trotsky to the late Stalin and early Khrushchev period. Here, we are solely concened with the unceasing battle between the regime and the intelligentsia, euphemistically referred to as 'the dissidents'. And because this is a love story the focus is on an individual — Boris Pasternak.

The poet first met Olga Ivinskaya in 1946 in the editorial office of the monthly literary journal Novy Mir, where she worked. He was out of favor with the Stalin regime and therefore barred from publishing anything. His second marriage had turned sour and he was desperate. The twice-widowed Olga felt compassion and yearned to mother him. He was 56, she was 34. Within days she became his mistress and the liaison lasted 14 years, until Pasternak's death.

Olga wasn't just a pretty face; she had considerable literary ability and was able to make inspired translations into Russian of foreign poets of the stamp of Rabindranath Tagore. And as everything she wrote was published she became the breadwinner — in addition to coping with an aging lover (to say nothing of his wife) who was temperamental and unreliable.

Pasternak started to consort with foreigners and hand them manuscripts for publication in the West, and the police, who could have taught Torquemada a few refinements of torture, pounced — on Olga. To punish Pasternak they trumped up some charge and sentenced her to four years of brutal labor in a Siberian camp. This was just the start.

Pasternak wrote Doctor Zhivago, the heroine of which — Lara — is modelled on Olga. Again, he sent the manuscript out of Russia and the novel gained him the Nobel Prize which, under pressure from the Soviet authorities, he stupidly refused. The bureaucracy and police continued to torment him mentally, but he was now too famous to be harmed physically. Instead, the authorities hounded Olga, accusing her of sending the Zhivago manuscript out of the country, and even of writing it herself.

And no sooner was Pasternak dead than the woman who had inspired him, typed his manuscripts, handled his literary affairs, collaborated on translation projects, and paid the bills, was arrested and sentenced to 12 years in work camps. And after all that suffering she has written this book as a tribute to her lover.

Although only one of many persecuted Soviet writers, and by no means the greatest of them, Pasternak became for the West the embodiment of the suffering of the Soviet Union's intelligentsia. But was he the literary genius he is made out to be? His masterpiece, Doctor Zhivago, was dismissed by Somerset Maugham as "good as a description of Russia but a lousy novel." Many will agree with that harsh verdict and one wonders whether his fame hasn't more to do with the Nobel Prize brouhaha than anything else.

Intimate portrait

I am inclined to think it does and even the infatuated Olga was unable to alter my view. Despite her attempt to deify Pasternak in A Captive of Time, the mistress emerges as a greater person than the master, and certainly more noble and valiant.

However, the book is well worth reading as the first detailed and intimate portrait of a tumultuous and extraordinary romance which flourished amid the intrigues and repression of post-war Russia.

Incidentally, as an indictment of the Soviet regime this book has few equals, and as it was published in the United States and the author, now 66, still ekes out a living in Moscow as a translator, one wonders how soon it will be before she again hears that dreaded knock on her door in the middle of the night.

A Tale of African Intrigue

BY FRED BARNES

Lawrence Sanders is one of a handful of phenomenally successful popular novelists, but his versatility gives him an added boost to the top. Perhaps best known for The First Deadly Sin and The Second Deadly Sin, he has also had great success with such widely divergent stories as The Marlowe Chronicles and now The Tangent Factor.

It is beautifully set in modern-day Africa, where intrigue, murder and repetitive coups offer ready-made plots for the novelist (an opportunity, incidentally, which is seldom taken up). Sanders creates a memorable character in the person of Obiri Anokye, who has just unseated his king and established the new republic of Asante.

But the Little Captain, as he is known, is no ordinary man, something that quickly becomes obvious to anyone who meets and deals with him. In Anokye burns a flame that brands him as a black Caesar, or perhaps another dreamer like Napoleon. His dream, which becomes obvious within weeks after his coup, is to unite Africa into one empire, with the Little Captain as its emperor and a chosen minion in each country as his satrap.

The Tangent factor in Anokye's plans is Peter Tangent, white representative of American oil interests in Asante, where rich oil finds have been made. The cynical Tangent, aware of the spark of greatness in Anokye, feels that everyone (the oil interests, the U.S., and most of all himself) may benefit by liaisons with the budding emperor. His string-pulling with the CIA, the French secret service, the oil interests and diplomats is something to behold, and something for Anokye to admire, not without some misgivings.

Sanders throws in an unusual love affair between Tangent and Amina Dunama, a black singer; a mercenary, Sam Leiberman, who remains an appealing character despite the fact that his business is murder, at which he is very good; and Anokye's mistress, a beautiful Frenchwoman who gives him up and marries the Little Captain's devoted sergeant and right-hand man to further Anokye's plans.

To this reviewer, Sanders best work has been The Second Deadly Sin, a truly superior murder mystery. The Marlowe Chronicles, a readable story about an aging but virile stage actor, showed his remarkable versatility. That aspect of his writing is reinforced by The Tangent Factor, a book that most readers will race through with great enjoyment.

THE TANGENT FACTOR*, by Lawrence Sanders. Longman. $12.95.

Second Round for Graham

By JOAN GEOGHEGAN

Author Winston Graham achieved notoriety in the U.S. as the author of the Masterpiece Theatre series "Poldark." As of June 4, "Poldark II," a second installment of adventures of Ross Poldark, also written by Graham, is running for 13 consecutive Sunday nights on the Public Broadcasting Service.

Slightly bruised from an argument in a London cab, the greying Mr. Graham ushered us into his New York City hotel suite with his left hand. Luckily, he joked, he wasn't planning on signing any autographs.

Graham did not write the Poldark, series for television. Rather, he wrote four novels — "Ross Poldark," "Demelza," "Jeremey Poldark" and "Warleggan" — from 1947 to 1953. He explained:

"I wrote the four books back in the ice age. They completed a cycle: the relationship between Ross and Elizabeth. It's the story of a man who is deprived of the woman he loves, then discovers once he has her, that he is really in love with his wife."

His inspiration for the Poldark family saga came from his home soil. "I was rather an ailing young man," he said. "My family moved to Cornwall when I was 17. When I was 19, my father died. Mother, fortunately had a small private income, and she staked me for a few years.

"Writing worked very quickly for me. I had no difficulty in getting my first book published. I did have the greatest difficulty in finding readers.

"I'd been in Cornwall a number of years. I love sand and sea and cliffs. It took me a while to get to know the Cornish people and for them to get to know me. They're a rather clanish Celtic race.

"I read history and found that 18th-century Cornwall was more important. They had 44 members in Parliament as opposed to five now. However, they were all 'rotten bouroughs' owned by the gentry.

"Any writer uses what he is and where he is," continued Graham. Since he was living in Cornwall, its people, its history and its landscape became the Poldark novels.

Are the characters in the Poldark series based on real people?

Graham answered:

"Elizabeth and George are based on people I knew. Most are composite characters. I got Ross' appearance sitting on a train opposite an aircraft pilot with a scar on his cheek." He had the melancholy air, which Poldark exudes.

"There are exact parallels to Elizabeth and George, but no one is exactly parallel to Ross Poldark."

After the first four novels were published, Mr. Graham went back to writing modern novels. However, the Poldark series never went out of print, and the author continued to receive letters begging for a continuation of the saga.

In 1963 he published a history of 16th-century Cornwall, then wrote "The Walking Stick," "Angell, Pearl and Little God" and "Marnie," which Alfred Hitchcock made into a movie.

In returning to the Poldark series he decided:

"It would never be the same Poldark, but going back and trying again was like fighting the sound barrier. It took five years to write the second series — 'The Black Moon,' 'The Four Swans' and 'The Angry Tide.' All are united by the theme of the parentage of Elizabeth's child."

Graham had just finished "The Four Swans" when the BBC made a series of the first four books.

He wasn't involved in the production of the first series and admitted, "I didn't approve of certain changes in the beginning and the ending. They were historically impossible. Burning of Trenwith would never have happened in England, nor did you ever see Cornish people turned out of their lands."

With the second Poldark series, however, Graham made it a condition that he have script approval.

"I didn't write the scripts because I was working on the third novel. I did drive very carefully when I was abroad." He feared that a sudden death would precipitate an inaccurate production.

Although he was dissatisfied with some aspects of the first "Poldark" series, he conceded, "I shouldn't shoot the first series down, it was a tremendous success."

However, once he finished "The Angry Tide" in March of 1977, he travelled to the BBC's Cornwall location to oversee the entire shooting of "Poldark II."

He raved at the BBC's technical expertise and insisted that every last person was dedicated to his job.

"In the first episode Ross comes back from the war. He is riding home in a red cloak and a hat worn Wellington-style, pointing forward. The day after the scene was shot, the research girl discovered hats were worn Napoleon style, pointing sideways, at that time. They re-shot the entire scene.

Are any of his other works up for a Masterpiece Theatre production?

Graham answered that many of his modern novels were made into films and very little material remains available for television. However, his novel, "Tumbled House," was just bought by Granada Television in England for a mini-series type production. If American viewers are lucky, the show may find its way to U.S. TV.

Since viewer response was responsible for the second "Poldark" series, will rave reviews of "Poldark II" precipitate a "Poldark III"?

"I think I've been working too hard," Winston Graham responded. "I wrote four novels in the 60s; a history of the Anglo-Spanish War, short stories and five novels in the 70s — also a play, which will be produced in Salisbury, England, this October."

And, no, he doesn't think they'll be any more "Poldark" novels forthcoming.

"Poldark II" takes place between 1794 and 1799, and features the swashbuckling hero struggling with the corrupt Warleggan in Cornwall, and as the Truro represetative in Parliament, struggling for social reform.

Graham insists that Captain Ross Poldark is not too good to be true. "People in Parliament were trying very hard. There were people like Ross. Some of Ross' battle for penal reform was taken directly from Howard's book of 'Penal Reform.'"

Author Winston Graham

The understated, greying author may be a citizen of the 20th century, but he clearly admitted, "Ross reflected the ideas of the author looking back on the day."

Graham has given his readers and viewers a romantic hero who champions the underdog and rights social wrongs. Ross Poldark is a refreshing addition to the 1978 season.
